Truman to Speak At Lincoln Tonight In First of Nine Major Talks Planned

(Picture on Page 6)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Aboard Truman Train, May 7.—President Truman today headed West on a coast-to-coast "nonpolitical" tour with the same family troupe that helped him win the 1948 election.

His wife and daughter, Margaret, who starred with him in 1948's most famous road show, were safely aboard.

Political or not, reporters were prepared to race for the rear platform at every whistle stop for an encore performance and that familiar introduction:

"How'd you like to meet my family?"

Entrained for the trip to Grand Coulee Dam, Wash., and points midway, was a press, radio and camera contingent of three score newsmen—full campaign size—and a staff of 20 presidential aides.

Only personal guests of the Trumans aboard were Mr. and Mrs. Mon C. Wallgren. Wallgren, now a member of the Federal Power Commission, and former Governor of Washington, is a close personal friend of the President and was one of the original boosters of Grand Coulee.

Mr. Truman boarded his private car, the Ferdinand Magellan, 30 minutes before train time. He told newsmen he thought everything that could be said about the trip had been said.

"But you'd better get up early in the morning," he ribbed.

Mr. Truman spent several minutes shaking hands with the children and families of traveling reporters. Then the Trumans posed happily for pictures on the rear platform. The train was off.

At Cumberland, Md., the train made its first stop. Mr. and Mrs. Truman and Margaret appeared briefly on the rear platform before a crowd of about 100 persons. There were cries of "There they are" and "Hello, Harry" as each took a bow.

President Truman walked through the entire length of the train shortly after it left Cumberland, saying "Hello" to all aboard. It was the kind of "inspection" he usually makes on a campaign trip.

At Pittsburgh, Mayor David Lawrence, Democratic National Committeeman, and two Democratic Allegheny County Commissioners came aboard to say "Howdy." The President did not appear on the platform.

Monday's first full day on the road will be studded with station stops in five States, testing Mr.

Heart of Rimouski, Quebec, swept by fire, resembles bombed-out town of World War II

$20-Million Blaze Burns For 24 Hours

2000 Are Homeless In Industrial Town Of 15,000 Persons In Quebec Province

Rimouski, Quebec, May 7 (AP).—A wind-whipped fire today left this St. Lawrence River city with more than 2000 homeless and damage estimated at 20 million dollars. Firemen slowly gained the upper hand tonight.

Partially confirmed reports said 10 persons had died during the fire and some 40 others were injured. It took 24 hours to check the roaring flames.

Some accounts said a third of the town had been destroyed. Reports of the number of houses gutted ranged from 100, estimated by Lieut. Col. Alex Gagnon, director of disaster relief for the Red Cross in Quebec Province, to 500 reported by other sources.

Many Buildings Destroyed

Two hotels, an orphanage, a hospital, a theater and many other buildings were destroyed. Colonel Gagnon said reports of the dead were:

Four children drowned in the Rimouski River.

Four women killed in two automobile explosions due to the fire.

Former Sheriff Charles Danjou, who died of a heart attack while fighting the flames.

One man burned in his house.

Showers of sparks fell in a residential section as smoke rolled through Rimouski, an industrial city of 15,000 about 180 miles northeast of Quebec.

The fire started early last night. High winds, at times reaching hurricane velocity of 80 miles an hour, blew down a high-tension power line at the Price Brothers Co. lumber yard in the west section of Rimouski. Authorities believe that touched off the blaze.

Flames Leap River

With the wind serving as a giant bellows, the flames jumped the Rimouski River, which runs through the center of the town, and ate into buildings on the east side.

Former Mayor Elzear Cote estimated the damage at 20 million dollars. He said the western section was deluged by a "rain of fire" when 15 million board feet of drying lumber burned.

Two of the Price Bros. lumber mills were destroyed, representing a loss of three million dollars. Five hundred men due to start work there this week were deprived of employment.

Firefighters from Rimouski and a dozen other towns along the St. Lawrence were handicapped by disruption of the water service as well as by the high winds.

Refugees seeking shelter left the city by train, bus and automobile for neighboring towns.

Hospital Evacuated

Tonight the western section of Rimouski was covered by a smoke haze.

Not a house was left standing in that part of the city.

The four-story brick St. Joseph Hospital was still burning tonight, but its 250 patients had been evacuated last night and today.

First they were moved down the street to the orphanage and home for the aged operated by the Sisters of Charity. When the flames approached that building, the

Acheson Met In Paris by McCloy and Top Advisers

Secretary to Confer With Schuman Today On Economic Role Of U. S. in Cold War

By Russell Hill

Paris, May 7 (NYHT.).—Secretary of State Dean Acheson flew into Paris today to begin discussing with western European leaders the problem of how to wage the cold war more efficiently and how to pay for it.

Acheson conferred throughout the day with American diplomats, including John J. McCloy, High Commissioner in Germany; Assistant Secretary of State George Perkins, Special Ambassador Philip Jessup, W. Averell Harriman, roving ambassador for the Economic Cooperation Administration; David K. E. Bruce, Ambassador to France; Charles E. Bohlen, minister at the Paris Embassy, and Robert Murphy, Ambassador to Belgium.

He was expected to explain Monday to French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman the American view that all Western nations must shoulder greater financial and economic burdens, and that the gap between defense requirements and present availabilities cannot be closed just by calling on the United States for more money.

France has asked the United States to share the cost of the war in Indo-China. French officials have made it clear that they feel France cannot bear the triple strain on its economy of rebuilding an army on the Rhine, fighting the Communists in the Far East, and balancing its foreign trade without dollar aid (after 1952).

Courtesy Call From Schuman

Acheson received a brief courtesy call from Schuman at the American Embassy tonight, but the two men reserved any policy discussion for the bilateral Franco-American conference that will go on all day Monday. It will be followed, later this week and next week, by talks at London between Acheson and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, by a conference between the three foreign ministers, and by a meeting of the 12-nation North Atlantic Pact Council.

A general appraisal of the current problems of the Western world and of the dangers which beset it will be made at this series of conferences, and the formulation of a joint policy will be attempted.

The specific questions to be dealt with include American arms aid to Indo-China, a more efficient organization of Western defense, the integration of Germany into western Europe, and the presentation to world public opinion of Western views.

Auriol, Bidault Speak

A few hours after Acheson arrived here, speeches were made by President Vincent Auriol and Prime Minister Georges Bidault, both of whom stressed the threat of world communism but at the same time held out hope that an

FEPC Forces May Be Able To Curb Debate

Senators' Poll Shows Only 5 Votes Needed To Block Filibuster

A secret poll by Southern Democrats indicated yesterday the Administration may get within striking distance of the 64 votes it needs to halt a Senate filibuster against a civil rights bill.

In their unofficial nose count, some Dixie Senators forecast 59 "yes" and 32 "no" votes—with five absentees—in the first effort to limit debate on a motion by Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, the majority leader, to bring up a Fair Employment Practices Commission bill.

Lucas' motion is up for argument in the Senate today with Southerners ready to start a filibustering round of talking in which they claim to have 23 members enlisted to participate.

Lucas already has said he won't try this week to kill off the filibuster. He plans next week to test Senate sentiment on winding up debate on his motion to take up the FEPC bill.

Republicans already have started circulation of a cloture—or debate-limiting—petition. Sixteen signatures on such a petition force a Senate vote two days later on the question of limiting each Senator to an hour's talk.

The Republicans are concerned primarily with getting as many GOP members to sign the petition as possible, since their floor leader, Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska, shares the credit for a new Senate rule on debate limitations.

This rule applies to motions such as Lucas made, on which filibusters couldn't be halted in the past. But it requires 64 affirmative votes before it can be invoked.

That means that any time filibusters can muster 33 of the 96 Senate votes—or enough votes combined with absentees to total 33—they can avoid any vote gag. Absentees thus count, in effect, as "no" votes.

Lucas has said that if he can get about 60 votes on the first try, he will try it again.

[The Southerners picked up an unexpected supporter yesterday in Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn). Kefauver, regarded as a foe of the filibuster although he opposes the bill, said he expects to vote against limiting debate, according to the United Press.—Editor's note]

FBI Typist a Victim

2 Die in Traffic Accidents, Lifting Area Weekend Toll to 11

Traffic accidents claimed the lives of two persons in nearby Maryland and Virginia early yesterday and boosted the weekend death toll for Washington and nearby areas to 11.

The two are Jerome Dudley Webb, 21, of RFD 1, Annandale, Va., and Knoxie Jefferson, 18, of Washington Grove, Md.

Webb, a typist with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was killed shortly after midnight when his car crashed into a tree on Duke st. extended, 3 miles east of Annandale.

So great was the force of impact that Webb was hurled from the car into a field on the south side of the highway. His skull was crushed, Dr. Emanuel Newman, Fairfax County coroner, pronounced him dead at the scene.

The body was removed to the Wheatley funeral home in Alexandria. It will be shipped to Benton, Ill., for burial.

Jefferson was killed also shortly after midnight when the car in which he was a passenger smashed into the rear of a truck.

The accident occurred on Route 29 near Snell's Bridge, 2 miles south of Highland, Howard County, Md.

Jefferson was riding in an auto operated by Hershel J. Nootenboom, Derwood, Md., when it struck the rear of a truck driven by Russell W. Collins, Scottsville, Va.

The auto rolled over several times after the crash, police said, but Nootenboom was uninjured, as was Collins.

Jefferson was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. George E. Burgtorf, Howard County medical examiner, who issued a certificate of accidental death.

Three persons were badly injured in a two-car collision at 3d and E sts. nw., at 5:05 p. m. yesterday.

They are Mrs. Edith Gowin, 35, of 1617 Buchanan st. ne., and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dupre of the same address.

The accident occurred when the Gowin car, operated by Mrs. Gowin's husband, John, 30, a Pentagon clerk, collided with another operated by John D. Burgess, 29, of 624½ 4th st. ne., a doorman at the Raleigh Hotel.

Neither Gowin, his 2-year-old

UAW Warns Of Strike on GM Contract

Detroit, May 7 (U.P.).—The CIO United Auto Workers Union today warned it would cancel its contract with General Motors "in the near future" unless more progress is made toward a new contract.

The union strike threat came as 89,000 Chrysler Corp. workers prepared to return to their jobs Monday after a 100-day walkout.

T. A. Johnstone, UAW General Motors director, said "no substantial progress" had been made in current talks with GM.

He said the union negotiating committee will serve notice of cancellation "in the near future unless developments in negotiations indicate a greater possibility for a peaceful settlement."

The UAW's contract, covering an estimated 270,000 production employes, expires May 29. However, under an agreement with GM, the union or company must give 30 days' notice of cancellation or the contract continues in effect.

The UAW is seeking $125 monthly pensions, $25 more than it got for its workers at Ford and under the Chrsyler agreement reached last Thursday. The pensions include Federal social security.

Cooling-Off Spell To Hit Area Today, Forecasters Say

Washington is due to cool off today after 48 hours of warm weather.

The Weather Bureau said today's high would be only 65 degrees compared to yesterday's 82 at 3 p. m. The called-for overnight low was 50 against yesterday's low of 66 at 7:40 a. m.

And, said the forecasters, it probably will remain cool for the next few days. Some cloudiness is expected along with today's temperature drop.

Yesterday's balmy, though somewhat overcast, weather brought out tourists and home folk in force. Park Police thought the turnout was "pretty big, but nothing unusual for a Sunday at this time of year."

Flood Leaves 8500 Homeless At Winnipeg

4 Hospitals Evacuated In 4th Largest City in Canada as River Rises

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 7 (U.P.). This flooded city braced itself tonight for the first flood crest of the raging Red River as a second crest bore down from the United States border. More than 8500 persons were homeless.

"The worst is yet to come," Acting Mayor C. E. Simonite warned.

City officials estimated the waters of the still-rising river would not recede for 10 days and that flood conditions would last six weeks.

Nearly half the evacuees fled from suburbs of this city of 300,000, fourth largest in Canada. The Red Cross and Army quartered the homeless in railway sleeping cars, barracks and private homes. In some low areas, 10 feet of water swirled through deserted homes. Nearly 1000 houses in Greater Winnipeg have been abandoned.

The Army directed relief work. Police guarded deserted houses against looting. Martial law has not been declared.

So far power lines were still holding and food supplies generally were adequate. Some sewers are flooded, and the city water supply may be endangered. Some 500 patients have been evacuated from four Winnipeg hospitals and two other hospitals may have to be emptied later.

The river has swollen to more than 27 feet, 9 feet above flood level. It rose about 10 inches in the past 24 hours. Some 2000 volunteers and 700 soldiers battled the floods and more were recruited every hour.

Novelist Admits Mother's Slaying, Boston Police Say

Boston, May 7 (AP).—Mrs. Carolyn Hillman, 74-year-old semi-invalid, was found bludgeoned to death in her hotel room tonight and police said her novelist son, Gordon Hillman, admitted the slaying.

Police reported Hillman, 49, said "My mind went blank" after having dinner with his mother.

Police said Hillman told how he picked up an empty liquor bottle, filled it with water and struck his mother four or five times on the head.

He told police he had been having money troubles and tried to conceal his plight from his mother.

Hillman's best known novel was "The Great Man Votes," later made into a motion picture.

Tydings Views Files as Key To 'Reds' Case

Says Loyalty Record Investigation Today May Yield Verdict

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday that examination of State Department loyalty files will give Senate investigators a complete "true or false" picture of Senator McCarthy's charges of communism in the Government in 81 cases.

Tydings thus took sharp issue with McCarthy, Wisconsin Republican who has termed the State Department records released by President Truman inadequate and "phony."

Tydings heads the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee which is looking into McCarthy's charges that the department is a haven for a lot of Communists and fellow travelers.

The committee will meet behind closed doors today to arrange to start a study of the department's files on 81 persons whom McCarthy, in a Senate speech last February, accused of being either Communists, Red sympathizers, or otherwise bad security risks.

The committee also will have before it today the recommendation of its chief counsel, Edward P. Morgan, that Earl Browder and Frederick Vanderbilt Field be cited for contempt of Congress.

In a radio talk yesterday, Tydings said McCarthy in his February speech had declared that "all the information he had to support the assertions he was making came from the State Department's own files. . . ." Tydings added:

"When we have completed our examination of those 81 files, we will be in a position, I think, to tell the country whether or not the Senator's charges are true or false. . . . We will really have the complete picture of what the Government knows about these 81 people."

McCarthy, in a speech at Chicago Saturday accused the Truman Administration of "deceit and dishonesty" in making available the State Department files. He said no real investigation can be made unless the committee also is given

Top U. S. Aide Named By Budenz as Red

Walter Winchell said in his broadcast last night that former Communist Louis F. Budenz has given the Senate investigators the name of a top Government official whom Budenz reportedly described as a card-carrying member of the Communist Party in this country. This and other facts in the report, as told The Washington Post later, could not be immediately checked.

Austrian Reds Get Only 5 Pct. of Vote In Russian Zone

Vienna (Monday), May 8 (U.P.).—Nearly 750,000 voters in the Russian occupation zone of Austria gave a humiliating defeat to the Communist Party in municipal elections, final returns showed today. Voting was yesterday.

The Communists got 5 percent of the total vote of 748,798 in Lower Austria. The provincial government announced the final returns were:

Catholic Peoples Party (anti-Communist) 389,058 votes (51.9 percent).

Socialists 299,323 (40 percent).

Communists 39,147 (5 percent).

Remaining votes were scattered.

Government officials called the result "an almost unprecedented defeat of the Communists in an area under Soviet control."

The Communists got about 5 percent of the total vote in the national parliamentary election last October, but yesterday's vote was more impressive because it was held entirely under the shadow of Russian guns.

As a result, Communists will control no city or town council and will elect no mayors.

Family and Neighbors Describe Youth Held For Crime as 'Quiet'

"He had been doing his school work all right but he got so he didn't want to go any more. He wanted to get a job."

William A. Tyler sr. of 2302 Pomeroy rd. se. was quietly speaking of his son, "Junior"—the 18-year-old youth who confessed to the Good Friday murder of two Lansburgh & Bro. Department Store watchmen.

Junior's plan to get a job at 14 was quickly cut short by school and juvenile court authorities, who sent him for two years to the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains for truancy.

"He was a normal kid," said the grief-stricken father, who won't believe his son's confession to the Lansburgh crimes. "He had some little downfalls, teen-age messes, but he hasn't been a problem child. He isn't stubborn."

"I can't believe he had anything to do with this Lansburgh thing," he said. "He was home for the night by 9 o'clock."

Tyler Was on List Of Store's Ex-Employes Still to Be Questioned

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

One month of plodding, routine work went into the investigation of the Good Friday murders of two watchmen of Lansburgh & Bro. Department Store before police finally got the "big break" which led to solution of the crime Saturday night.

One month of questioning more than a thousand persons — employes, former employes, all the people connected in the remotest way with the store—some of them quizzed three, four and even five times.

One month of checking alibis, fingerprints, police records and addresses, of tracking down those who had moved.

The methodical investigation probably would have led police to the man who savagely stabbed the two store guards to death. For William A. Tyler, jr., 18, who has confessed killing John Carpenter, 66, and Oliver R. Hess, 57, was a former employe of the store.

Police had his name on the list of former employes they were questioning. But when they checked

Asia Feels Chief U. S. Concern Is War, Pakistan Premier Says

New York, May 7 (AP).—Prime Minister of Pakistan Liaquat Ali Khan today said that Asiatics think the United States is interested only in war with Russia and not the establishment of world security.

The Premier, who arrived in this country last Wednesday, spoke on the Chicago Round Table of the Air via the National Broadcasting Co. Liaquat Ali Khan spoke from NBC's New York studio.

"There is an impression in the East that the United States is only interested in war with Russia, and that it is not doing all that it should toward establishing the security of the world," he said.

He said world peace could best be guarded by helping the backward areas, particularly in southern Asia.

The "most dangerous" dispute facing the world, he said, was whether India or Pakistan would rule Kashmir.

The Pakistan Premier said he conferred recently with India's Prime Minister Nehru about the Kashmir problem but that they "did not make much progress."

He said the United States should assume a greater role toward helping solve the Kashmir problem.

"It is not a question of supporting one country or another," he said, but that this country should "implement" the plebiscite of Kashmir, under which the people would decide to join either Pakistan or India.

The Pakistan Premier said the Security Council of the United Nations ordered the plebiscite but did not set an exact date for the balloting.

$68 Million in Spanish Ducats

Armada Gold Galleon Reported Found in Mud of Scottish Bay

Tobermory, Scotland, May 7 (AP). Royal Navy divers today claimed they have found a Sixteenth Century Spanish treasure galleon buried in the mud of Tobermory Bay. Ancient legend, not entirely substantiated by historical research, says there are 30 million gold ducats ($68,700,000) aboard.

The old stories hereabouts say the galleon was the Duque Florencia of the Spanish Armada, supposed to have been sunk in 1588 while carrying gold to pay Spanish fighters attempting a conquest of Britain. One story has it that she was scuttled by an angry and thrifty Scot after the Florencia's captain refused to pay him for supplies he purchased.

The divers have been working for weeks to uncover the old hull. The climax came with the recovery of two silver medallions from the muck. They are very thin, and about the size of an American quarter. On one side is the figure of a reclining nude, a star at her feet. On the back is a hook.

So confident was Lieut. Comdr. Dr. Reay Parkinson, boss of the treasure-hunting expedition, that he sent off a message to the Admiralty:

"We have found the Spanish galleon Duque Florencia."

The Navy instructed Parkinson to discontinue his operations. The navy's agreement with the eleventh Duke of Argyll, who owns the galleon, if there is one, and the treasure, if there is any, was merely to locate the hulk. If the Duke wants to investigate further about the ducats, he'll have to take the necessary steps.

Memorial Bridge Closing Begun; New Span to Open

Nightly closing of Memorial Bridge began last night and will continue through May 14.

The bridge will be closed from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. to allow workmen to make repairs. The new highway span will be opened to motorists at noon Tuesday, however.

No repairs to the road surface of Memorial Bridge are contemplated, National Capital Parks officials said. The repairs will consist largely of cleaning and lubricating steel beam cushions, and repairing chipped concrete which surrounds the structural steel.

Further Wheat Crop Slump Is Predicted

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The eyes of the world will be on the second floor of the South Building of the Agriculture Department at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

At that hour the Government Crop Reporting Board will release its fateful estimate of the condition of the winter wheat crop as of May 1.

Most observers expect that a still further drop under its pessimistic report of a month ago will be reported. In fact, some competent observers predict the drop will be as great as another 100 million bushels (about a quarter of a billion dollars at present prices).

Any such drop would have an effect upon the pocketbook of everyone in the United States, as well as in nearly every other country. Already commodity prices have gone up sharply in recent weeks, attributed chiefly to the prospect of a poor wheat crop.

Soybeans Up 65 Percent

Soybeans are up $1.25—or about 65 percent—above the postwar low of a few months ago of $1.91. Wheat is up one third, or 65 cents; corn, 45 cents or almost 50 percent. Butter is up 3 cents a pound or about 6 percent; eggs 10 cents a dozen or 35 percent.

Last month the board estimated a winter wheat crop of 763 million bushels—or 138 million bushels less than a year ago and over 300 million less than the record crop of 1947. It would be the smallest since 1944.

If any further decrease is noted Wednesday it will mean:

1. That this year's total wheat crop—winter wheat, spring wheat and durum—may be less than a billion bushels for the first time since 1944. Such a harvest would not provide enough wheat to meet consumption, livestock feed and seed—plus requirements for export.

2. That the Government might suffer a severe loss under the International Wheat Agreement. In this agreement the Government promises to sell 168 million bushels each year to and including the crop year 1952-53 at not more than $1.80 a bushel. May wheat closed yesterday in Chicago at above $2.34. The Government's loss this year may run to 100 million dollars.

Reports from the winter wheat belt—Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska—indicate weather is just the opposite of what is should be for a good wheat crop. Weather continues dry and no moisture is in prospect. In the Northwest—Montana, the Dakotas, etc.—where there have been recent floods and dry weather is needed, further moisture is predicted. The weather has been so wet and cold that little spring wheat has been planted yet in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and corn planting time is here. Many observers expect a lot of acreage that would have gone into wheat may go to corn, soybeans or other crops.

Since the April 10 report, trained observers have stated that further deterioration in wheat has been apparent. C. M. Galvin of James E. Bennett & Co., Chicago brokers, one of the last of the old-time crop observers for grain brokers, predicted a winter wheat crop of 663 million bushels—down just 100 million in a month. The Santa Fe Railway System observer. C. W. Lane, predicted a drop of 56 million bushels in the five States served by his lines—all the wheat States except Nebraska.

From the field The Washington Post got these forecasts:

NEBRASKA: Extension Editor George Round reported conditions generally favorable "but could deteriorate fast when hot weather comes. Rainfall one third below normal since fall. Growth slow because of cold weather. Green bug scare moving north from Kansas."

Kansas Wheat Deteriorated

KANSAS: Wheat generally deteriorated. Drought and insects unusually bad."

OKLAHOMA: Ed Lemons, extension editor, reports: "Present wheat condition very poor. Luckly if we make 50 percent crop. Green bug infestation has been worst on record. Bugs moved on now, but half million acres destroyed and another two million damaged. Farmers have sprayed half million acres to control greenbugs."

NEW MEXICO: Hal R. Taylor, assistant extension director: "Winter wheat condition about 30 percent of normal. Crop has deteriorated in last month. Drought unusually bad."

KANSAS: Emmet Womer, State production and marketing chairman: "Kansas PMA committee estimates wheat has deteriorated 10 percent or more in last 30 days. Damage mostly drought but greenbugs a factor in decline. Rain all over Kansas badly needed.

TEXAS: Louis Franke, extension director: "Wheat prospects in important high plains counties declined still further. Greenbugs have disappeared by only after destroying a large part of the crop. Drought has not been relieved. In low rolling plains wheat was recovering from the drought."

Signizcantly, all those reporting commented on the continuing dust storms. All expressed the hope they were not as bad as in the Dust Bowl area. But Lemons, in Oklahoma, remarked: "Dust storms are not like Dust Bowl years, yet we are keeping our fingers crossed."

Pampa, Tex., May 7 (AP).—"I'm just going to Washington as one small protest," the first Republican Congressman elected by Texans in 24 years said today.

Ben H. Guill, personable, 40-year-old Pampa broker and former schoolteacher who yesterday defeated 10 Democrats to win a berth as United States Representative from the Eighteenth Congressional District, added:

"I'm no intellectual giant and I don't have any ideas about going to the Capital and changing the Government. I don't know anything about Washington—just barely know what direction it is from here.

"But if I go there as one small protest, maybe the powers that be won't think they have the whole country in the bag. Maybe some of those big shots will take a look at this little segment of Texas and take warning."

Guill will be the first Texas Republican in Congress since Harry M. Wurzbach of San Antonio left the office in 1929.

The election will carry him only to January 3—the unexpired term of Gene Worley, who resigned after nine years to take a Federal bench in Washington.

"I certainly intend to run for a full term in the November general election on the Republican ticket," Guill said. "I know what a high hurdle it will be to beat one Democrat. I had 'em divided yesterday—10 to 1."

Congress this week will determine the fate of a Federal official whose powers—in his own words—"are absolute and his authority final to an outstanding degree seldom accorded a single officer in a peacetime agency."

The official is Robert N. Denham, general counsel to the National Labor Relations Boards. His chief job is investigating and prosecuting unfair labor practices under the Taft-Hartley Management Labor Relations Act. In these two fields, the general counsel is separate from and independent of the NLRB, which sits as a court on the cases Denham selects for prosecution.

The President recently announced his intention, under the Reorganization Act, of eliminating the general counsel's office and turnng over his powers and functions to the five-man NLRB.

Mr. Truman's reorganization plan—No. 12—can be balked, however, should either chamber of Congress reject the proposal by a constitutional majority, that is, at least 49 votes in the Senate, 218 in the House.

Hearings have been held by the appropriate committees of both sides of Capitol Hill. The plan has been given the green light by the House committee; the red light by the Senate committee.

Both chambers are expected to vote on the issue this week. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) sponsor of the bill to kill Reorganization Plan 12, has said he hopes to get a vote on his measure Wednesday. Efforts are being made to get even quicker action by the House.

Right now, Capitol Hill observers believe Plan No. 12 will survive its House test, but it may come a-cropper in the Senate. Foes of Plan 12 are confident Taft has enough pledged votes to block the proposal.

It so happens—not by coincidence—that the champions of the Taft-Hartley Act are attacking Plan 12, and opponents of the Taft-Hartley Act are fighting for it. The proponents of T-H see in the reorganization plan a move to weaken administration of the act by dumping General Counsel Denham, rather than a move to get more efficiency in the administration of the law—as maintained by President Truman.

The foes of T-H insist they would want the position of independent general counsel abolished even if Denham were not in the job.

There are some middle-of-the-road legislators on the Hill who privately wish that the issue could be settled without the side-issue of Denham's personality. But that would mean the resignation of Denham, and he would be unlikely to take such a drastic step in the middle of such a fight.

Denham himself has defended the autonony of his office; the five-man board has asked that the President's plan be accepted, and the general counsel's independent post be eliminated.

Should Reorganization Plan No. 12 be nullified in Congress, new fuel will be added to the already explosive situation within the NLRB.

Recently, the five-man board withdrew from the general counsel the authority for hiring and firing top personel. Denham has stated he will not recognize the action of the board, and will do as he wishes. Currently, there's a top post open in Memphis. Should Denham carry out his threat to defy the board, he could pick a man for the job without getting the board's approval. The board could retaliate by refusing to authorize the payment of the appointee's salary. The result would be stalemate—and NLRB paralysis.

There's another sore point. Denham has publicly urged employers not to abide by decisions of the NLRB, but to fight them out in the courts. Yet as general counsel to the NLRB, it is one of Denham's duties to defend those very board decisions in the courts.

Study Asked Of Russia's Slave Labor

George Delaney, international representative of the American Federation of Labor, proposed yesterday that a commission of distinguished citizens make a survey of "slave labor" in Soviet Russia.

Delaney said the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations has failed so far to act on a 1947 proposal of the AFL that the council sponsor such a study.

Writing in the AFL's monthly magazine, the American Federationist, Delaney said it was estimated that Russia has "enslaved close tot 15,000,000 helpless human beings in its many slave labor projects and camps."

"A complete slave state as it exists in Soviet Russia," he said, "presents a constant threat to the freedom, security and well-being of other nations.

"We know that Russia will not long be content to confine her nefarious machinations within the borders of her own nation and the unfortunate countries now under her control."

Delaney said a commission of persons whose integrity and sincerity of interest in human welfare are beyond challenge should inquire into the use and extent of forced labor.

The commission, he said, should base its findings "on either documentation furnished by reliable organizations or on actual surveys made within the boundaries of all nations of the world." He said the findings should be made public.

5000 Witness Langley Day Air Program

Some 5000 persons yesterday attended the Langley Day Air Show at Beacon Airport, Groveton, Va.

The show was sponsored by the Washington Air Derby Assn. and Beacon Airport with the cooperation of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission. Winners in the races:

Ercoupe—James Stargel, first, and Marjorie Harrison, second; biplane—Ed Nass, first, and Hubert Burrows, second; 100 horsepower—Don Beers, first, and James Davis, second; women's free-for-all—Mrs. Vera Foster, first, and Mrs. Wendall, second; parachuting—Hi Quistgaard; unlimited horsepower—James Young, first, and Gorden Seidell, second.

The show featured a ground display by the Civil Air Patrol, and demonstrations of a Hiller "306" helicopter.

State Science Parley Starts Wednesday

Virginia men and women of science will assemble at Roanoke, Va., Wednesday through Friday, for scientific sessions of the Virginia Academy of Science.

Some 224 scientific papers are scheduled to be presented during the three-day conclave.

Meeting jointly with the VAS will be the Junior Academy of Science, and its anual Virginia Science Talent Search.

Sections of the academy will discuss latest developments in the fields of agriculture, astronomy, mathematics, physics, bacteriology, biology, chemistry, education, engineering, geology, medicine, psychology, science teaching and statistics.

Featured speaker at conclusion of the annual meeting will be Dr. Russell S. Poor, chairman, University Relations Division of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, Oak Ridge, Tenn.

AFL Slated to Vote 10-Cent Political Program Assessment

The AFL executive council, meeting in Philadelphia today, is expected to approve a voluntary assessment of 10 cents a member to pump new funds into its political education program.

The American Federation of Labor got into active politics in the fall of 1947, shortly after the GOP-dominated Eightieth Congress passed the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Redations Act. At that time, the AFL set up Labor's League for Political Education as its political arm.

Labor's league participates in direct political campaigning in support of particular candidates—with funds raised through strictly voluntary individual contributions. Political education activities of the league are financed by voluntary assessments against the 100-odd affiliates of the AFL.

Each AFL union can decide for itself whether or not it wishes to join and help finance Labor's League. The AFL railroad affiliates, for example, prefer to operate on the political level through the more experienced Railway Labor's Political League.

The first voluntary assessments, levied in 1948, of 10 cents per member, raised about $700,000. More than half of this money, approximately $400,000, has gone to help finance the Nation-wide radio news broadcast of Frank Edwards, heard nightly over Mutual, five times a week, with a brisk, sprightly roundup of the news and a pro-labor viewpoint on the major issues of the day.

The AFL itself has to chip in with about $600,000 more for the Edwards show, which runs into a million dollars a year. So far, the AFL's leaders are believed to be pleased with the radio experiment, and now they are thinking of producing a movie or two.

A second big item on the AFL council agenda is the CIO's most recent bid for unity among the major labor organizations. CIO President Philip Murray proposed setting up a top-level committee to coordinate the participating union's economic, legislative, and political programs, with the long-rang view of achieving an organic merger of the organizations.

There have been other unity proposals forthcoming from the CIO in the past, and to these the AFL council has replied that organic unity must come first. The council has rejected proposals of functional unity that permit rivalry to continue in the organizing fields.

The AFL council is expected to approve the return of the 600,000-member International Association of Machinists into the AFL fold. The IAM twice walked out in a long dispute with the Carpenters over jurisdiction. An agreement is believed to have been reached over this stormy issue.

Bank Profits Up 12% To $831 Million in '49

By The Associated Press

Commercial banks earned net profits, after taxes, of 831 million dollars last year, it was announced yesterday.

Chairman Maple T. Harl of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation said this was 12 percent above the previous year and only 8 percent below the 1945 record.

Soviet Seen Cooling On Expansion Abroad

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

A study of Russia's expansion from 1939 to 1949 indicates that the Kremlin is now more concerned with exploiting the lands and peoples around the Soviet Union than seeking overseas areas.

Prepared by Dr. Ernest Day Carman under the Geneva Institute of International Studies and released yesterday by the Public Affairs Press of Washington, the report stresses that Soviet influence has "probed deep into Central Europe and radiated throughout all China."

Meanwhile, however, the Soviet Union has withdrawn its "claim to the Dodecanese, lost interest in acquiring Libya and, after gaining partial control over Tangier, failed to appoint administrative personnel," declares Dr. Carman.

The Washington political scientist, who spent much time in Europe gathering material, brings out that the Soviet Union "has gained many sincere partisans among the minorities of Central Asia" by dramatizing herself as the champion of persecuted peoples.

'Nationalism Befriended'

As for methods, Dr. Carman reports: "Nationalism is befriended and encouraged, and the impression is generated, particularly among the downtrodden nationalities of Asia, that the same national element within the Soviet Union is the official spokesman for all questions relating to that nationality."

In the case of the Asian borderlands, Dr. Carman declares Soviet aims to undermine Western influence are being strengthened by the development of state libraries for the particular nationality involved, schools giving instruction in that nation's own language, national theaters, journals and so on.

To further attract neighboring peoples, the Soviet Union has created an "aura of progress" in the large Soviet border cities like Batum and Erivan near Turkey, Baku and Ashkhabad near Iran, Stalinabad near Afghanistan, and others.

Dr. Carman emphasizes that "it is apparent that as long as the USSR presents its program to relatively backward peoples, it has an excellent chance of success."

"It is equally true," he adds, "that the Soviet program will make less progress against a civilization with a strong culture or a nation with considerable material advantages."

Since 1939, however, Dr. Carman states, the total population under Soviet governments has increased from 170 million to 750 million. About 24,355,500 non-Russians, he adds, have been absorbed directly into the Soviet Union during this this.

In the same period Russia acquired 273,947 square miles of territory, "an area larger than all of France, Belguim, the Netherlands and Portugal." Thus according to Dr. Carman, the Soviet empire now includes 32 percent of the world's people and about 30 percent of the land area.

A threatening note in all this, he asserts, is that the non-Soviet world can hardly be expected to accede to further Soviet imperialism. Likewise, the Russians also will resist expansion against their territorial sphere.

"Violent Conflict" Possible

Thus, taken together, a "violent conflict" may well result from any attempts to change this situation, Dr. Carman warns.

And, adding to this potential danger, the Soviet peoples themselves would resist the West since they apparently consider "their government's aggrandizement and aggression as just and right."

"They may well be convinced that it is their historic mission to liberate backward peoples of Asia and the working classes of all countries whom they may honestly regard as enslaved by the capitalist imperialists," Dr. Carman says.

69 Arrested In 'Protest' For Peace

London, May 7 (U.P.). — Sixty-nine persons were arrested today when Communist-led demonstrators, shouting "We want peace," tried to force their way through police lines to Prime Minister Attlee's residence at No. 10 Downing st.

They were charged with disturbing the peace and violating a ban against political parades.

One man was arrested when Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, spoke at two rallies of his "Union Movement" in the East End. Hecklers tried to drown out Mosley by shouting for "Music, Music, Music" instead of his speeches over a loud speaker.

The leftists who tried to storm Attlee's residence were holding a delayed celebration of May Day in Trafalgar Square.

About 400 of the estimated 1200 persons who stood for two hours in a drizzle to hear trade union and Communist speakers in Trafalgar Square rushed down Whitehall st. when the meeting ended and tried to enter Downing st.

Youths pulled small red and white "peace" signs from under their coats and chanted "We want peace" as police rode their horses onto the sidewalks to disperse the demonstrators.

Several men tried to pull police off their horses and were promptly locked up in roving police vans. Others who appeared to be leading the march were hustled to the nearest police station.

Czechs Mark 'Liberation' With Parade

Prague, May 7 (UP).—The Czech army and other national units paraded in pouring rain today in celebration of the fifth anniversary of Czechoslovakia's liberation by the Soviet army.

President Klement Gottwald and Russia's Mikhail Suslov and Marshal N. A. Gulbanin watched the celebration with Communist leaders from 16 countries.

(The Czech government informed the United States embassy last week that American memorial services commemorating the fifth anniversary of the American liberation of Pilsen were "undesirable.")

Units of the Czech army, SNB (security organs), and the Workers Militia passed in review for more than three hours before the red-clad platform in the middle of downtown Wenceslas Square. Large painted portraits of Generalissimo Stalin, Gottwald and other Communist leaders were posted in the square.

Allied observers watched the parade from a separate stand after deciding at the last moment to attend the celebrations.

More than 250,000 persons saw the parade.

Several hundred white "doves of peace" were carried in the parade and were set free before the Communist leaders' platform.

For the first time since the end of the war there were no airplane formations overhead. Only one observation plane flew over the city.

Nicaraguan Congress Elects Somoza President

Managua, Nicaragua, May 7 (AP). The Nicaraguan Congress today elected Senator Anastacio Somoza President to succeed Victor Manuel Roman y Reyes, who died yesterday in Philadelphia.

Nicaragua had no vice president.

Somoza is the candidate of the Liberal Party for the forthcoming presidential election scheduled for May 21 and will be opposed by Conservative Emilio Chamorro Benard. The victor will take office a year later.

Order Founder Raised by Pope To Sainthood

Vatican City, May 7 (AP).—Anthony Mara Claret, humble Spanish textile worker who became Roman Catholic Archbishop of Cuba 100 years ago, was made a saint today in a resplendent ceremony led by Pope Pius XII.

His canonization—the second of the 1950 Holy Year—brought thousands of pilgrims to Rome from all parts of the world, where there are now houses of the order he founded, Missionary Sons of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, known also as the Claretian Fathers.

Many of the 55,000 pilgrims assembled in St. Peter's Square in the pre-dawn darkness. The long ceremony began hours later as the bells of St. Peter's and those of Rome's nearly 500 churches rang.

St. Peter's was thronged when the Pontiff, dressed in gold-braided white, was carried on his portable throne from the Sistine Chapel to the portico of the church.

At the left of the papal throne was Donna Carmen Polo de Franco, wife of the Spanish chief of state, and his daughter and son-in-law, the Marques and Marquesa of Villaverde, recently married.

The Pope set October 24—the date of Claret's death in 1870—for the annual celebration of the saint's anniversary.

Anthony Claret was born December 24, 1807, in Salent, diocese of Vich, near Barcelona. His parents were textile workers and when he was 17 he was taken to Barcelona to perfect his trade, but his piety attracted the attention of the Bishop of Vich.

Claret became a priest in 1835 and 15 years later Archbishop of Cuba. The order he founded now has 220 houses in North and South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and the Philippines.

100 Die in Rail Wreck

New Delhi, India, May 7 (U.P.).—The speeding Punjab mail train plunged into a ravine near the village of Lahabun, 200 miles northwest of Calcutta today, and one survivor said: "There must have been at least 100 killed." He said there were indications the train had been sabotaged.

Hoover Opposes Recognition Of China Reds by U. S. or U. N.

By the United Press

Former President Herbert Hoover warned last night against United States recognition of Communist China or seating of it's delegation in the United Nations.

He said either move would be a further surrender in the cold war."

Hoover expressed his views in a letter to Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), who with 34 other Senators, has asked President Truman for new assurances the United States will not recognize the Chinese Red regime or admit in it to the U. N.

Normal diplomatic relations, Hoover cautioned, "would plant another nest of Communist propagandists and agents" in the United States.

He refused to back down on his recent proposal—rejected by Mr. Truman—that the United Nations be reorganized and Russia and her puppet states excluded. He wrote:

"If the United Nations is ever to be useful to the human race, it must free itself of Communist domination—not add to it."

Hoover wrote Knowland that he was not assuming this Government is prepared to take action toward either diplomatic recognition or UN membership for the Chinese Communists. But he said a clear-cut declaration from the Truman Administration would "clear up some of the fog in these questions."

"Certainly the recognition of the Moscow satellite government in China would be a further surrender in the cold war which Gen. (Omar N.) Bradley (chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff) intimates we are losing," he wrote.

U. N. Without Reds Unwise, Says Nehru

Lake Success, May 7 (AP).—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India declared today former President Herbert Hoover's proposal to reorganize the United Nations without the Communist nations is "unwise and harmful."

In a message read over a United Nations broadcast, Nehru declared: "If any attempt is made to change the essential nature of the United Nations, it will not lead to another or a more powerful organization which can work for peace. It would only mean the break-up of something that is actually and potentially valuable, with nothing to take its place. . . ."

Railroads Spend Record 1.3 Billion For '49 Equipment

By The Associated Press

The railroad industry yesterday reported a record capital expenditure for equipment and other improvements in 1949, totaling $1,312,200,000.

The Association of American Railroads said this was $38,716,000, or 3 percent, above the previous record year of 1948, and 53.7 percent above 20 years ago when materials cost less than half today's prices. The report said the railroads are continuing to maintain a substantial backlog of orders for new cars and locomotives.

Railroads doing $1,000,000 or more gross business annually installed 84,669 new freight cars, 946 new passenger cars and 1865 new locomotives in 1949.

Of the locomotives, 1808 were diesel and 57 steam.

Catholic Youth Fund Appeal Ends This Week

This week will be the fourth and last of the 1950 Catholic Youth Organization appeal for funds to expand activities in the District.

Setting the pace so far in the drive, according to CYO President Leo A. Rover, are six parishes, including Sacred Heart, St. Dominic's, St. Martin's, Blessed Sacrament, St. Francis Xavier's and St. Anthony's.

The goal of this year's campaign is $25,000. It is being directed by Raymond A. DuFour, Washington insurance broker.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

HAD EVE resisted the apple, people would still be plucking their meals, full-flavored and ready-to-eat, from trees and bushes. But by her intransigence, she made invention of the cook stove inevitable, and thus divided mankind into the two camps in which we find ourselves to this day. On one side are aligned the epicures, who live to eat. On the other, the usually single-tracked persons who only eat to live. I say "usually single-tracked persons" advisedly. From my point of vantage, I have observed all sorts and conditions of men at feeding time. Those who order the first thing on the menu, rush the waiter, bolt their food and dash out are generally in the all-engrossing pursuit of some single goal to attainment of which their lives are exclusively devoted. The epicure seems, on the whole, to be better balanced. He is aware that the niceties make life enjoyable. He is neither hurried nor harried. He has, or makes, time for living. He is, in short, a more mature person. While some may be born with the epicurean instinct, I like to think that a certain amount of seasoning is required to bring a man to full appreciation of the truth of Roy Alciators tenet that "Eating is the most pleasurable of the innocent pastimes." To me it is both significant and reassuring that the fabulous Brillat-Savarin, the epicureans' epicure, was also the foremost philosopher of his time!

My Aunt Adeline is fond of saying that "Roast Turkey is pure American, and one of bountiful Nature's most noble gifts to man!" Amen. Take our Parchey's turkeys, for instance. We scour Virginia to find tender young Toms, never more than 18 months old, and preferably fed a diet of corn and peanuts, liberally interspersed with violets (which have a magical effect on a young turkey's texture!) These delicate gobblers are rushed to us, perfectly dressed and meticulously cleaned by hand.

Then Chef Heller works his legerdemain. His ambrosial dressing is a lightly mixed blending of fresh bread (dried in the oven until every drop of moisture is removed) seasoned with salt, pepper and poultry seasoning and finely chopped onions, green peppers and fresh celery, sauteed in Brookfield butter. Into the Tom this goes; he is sewed deftly and brushed with Brookfield butter, melted in a saucepan with celery, onion, salt, pepper.

All during the slow roasting, Chef Heller hovers about the oven, basting, sniffing, basting . . . not trusting these delectable chores to any subordinate. Hours later, when his masterpiece emerges, crisp skin cracking-brown, savory stuffing steaming its delicious aroma; the succulent meat firm, glistening-white, juicy and fork-cutting tender . . . Chef Heller makes his gravy. To the rich basting juices in the bottom of the roaster he adds a few drops of Worcestershire and a wineglass of dry, nutty cocktail sherry, allows it to bubble while he stirs furiously, then dashes it over the thick-sliced turkey meat on your platter. Served piping hot, with a generous glob of rich sauce of whole New England cranberries and your choice of vegetables, our Roast Virginia Turkey makes an entree of incomparable delight on Parchey's two-dollar full-course dinner. Enjoy it this very evening. Our address: 19th at K, N.W.

It's a strange thing, but people ponder over the list of available appetizers longer than any other portion of a menu. But not Dr. Thomas J. Rice, the noted Washington epicure. He always calls for a Filet of Herring, the extra-special kind we prepare ourselves, and not to be confused with the wishy-washy stuff that masquerades as Filet of Herring in a jar or can!

Our herring are pedigreed scions of sturdy Viking stock, and like so many rich descendants, they come to us pickled in wine. Wilbur Smith, our Salad Chef, prepares a fitting sauce by marinating thin strips of fat, sweet Bermuda onions in imported Tarragon vinegar, heavily seasoned with corns of allspice, slivers of crisp bay leaf, a touch of sugar and a dash of salt. In this he drenches the Filets, and then all but hides them from view with a great blob of Embassy Dairy's rich sour cream. As a final fillip, he surrounds the plate with big, ripe, fresh olives imported from Italy, and packed in pure olive oil. A truly regal prelude to a memorable meal . . . and highly salubrious, as Dr. Rice will gladly testify! Try it. The address: 19th at K Sts., N.W.

Slogan for National Restaurant Week (May 8-14): "Eating out is Fun!" It's most fun at Parchey's. Come and see!

understanding with the Soviet leaders was still possible.

Bidault said: "There is on our continent and beyond a bloc which did not build itself through liberty and which does not maintain itself without tragedies. It is not by peaceful methods that it enlarges itself."

While declaring that "it is our right and elementary duty to organize the community of free peoples," Bidault added that accords were possible "with all those who might end by showing themselves conciliatory." Every honest man, he said, knew that France was threatening nobody.

Referring to Soviet charges, Auriol said it was an "impudent lie" that France was preparing a war or was associated with a policy of aggression. It was not too late, however, he said, for the statesmen who were allied during the war to find each other again "united and confident," on the road which led to victory, the only one which leads to peace.

These statements might be interpreted as giving substance to reports that the Western statesmen are contemplating an offer to the Soviet Union to conclude a peace treaty with Germany on the basis of free general elections there.

Attitude Toward Germany

France's attitude toward Germany, which will come up for discussion at the foreign ministers' conferences, was defined by Auriol.

He said Germany had a chance to turn to democracy and cooperation with other peoples. Frenchmen, he said, would be prepared to say no more about what they had suffered at the hands of the Germans "on the condition that the German people does not forget, that it submits to necessary international controls and does not rebuild an army and arms either in the East or the West."

The three Western foreign ministers will review their German policies this week and try to see how Germany might be brought more closely into the European community. There is no prospect, however, of important concessions to the West German government through a revision of the occupation statute. That is not to be reviewed before September at the earliest.

Chaplain Unit To Give Award To MacArthur

Gen. Douglas MacArthur will receive a citizenship award from the Military Chaplains Association during its annual conference at the Shoreham, Tuesday through Thursday.

Chaplain Leighton E. Harrell of Mount Alto Hospital said that the general will name a representative to accept the award for him. It will be presented at a banquet at 7 p. m. Thursday closing the conference.

Sessions of the association, which will be attended by Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish chaplains, will begin at 10 a. m. Tuesday.

On Wednesday at 8:30 a. m. there will be a memorial service for war dead at Arlington National Cemetery. At noon Wednesday Gen. George C. Marshall, former Chief of Staff, who now heads the American Red Cross, will speak.

The award to General MacArthur, Supreme Allied Commander in the Pacific, will be "for outstanding contributions in the field of strengthening the spiritual foundations of citizenship as related to the National Defense . . ."

Orchestra to Mark National Music Week

The Agriculture Department Symphony Orchestra will participate in a special observance of National Music Week, under the sponsorship of the Sesquicentennial Commission, today at 8:30 p. m.

The event will be held in the Interdepartmental Auditorium, 13th st. and Constitution ave. nw. The concert is free. Tickets may be obtained in Room 204, Board of Trade offices in the Evening Star Building, 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

New Military Training Plan Disclosed at ROA Convention

Atlanta, May 6 (AP).—A new military training plan that would provide America hundreds of thousands of trained reservists and give college training to the best of them was disclosed tonight by Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans.

Evans, national executive director of the Reserve Officers Association, said the plan is getting careful consideration from President Truman, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the heads of America's fighting forces.

The plan was developed by the Reserve Officers Association and the American Legion as a substitute for universal military training.

The program calls for establishment of summer training camps running 12 or 13 weeks. They would be open to high school graduates on a volunteer basis. The training there would be thorough, up-to-date basic training for Army, Navy and Air Force.

Ten to 15 percent of the outstanding trainees would be awarded four-year college scholarships at colleges having reserve officer training.

They would take the ROTC training along with their regular college course and go into the reserve as commissioned officers upon graduation.

Other outstanding trainees would be awarded scholarships to junior colleges or vocational schools for two years or one year.

These too would take special technical courses of military value along with their regular school work. After graduation they would go into the reserve as high ranking noncommissioned officers.

R. E. Lee Chapter Plans Meeting Today

The monthly meeting of the Robert E. Lee Chapter Reserve Officers Association of the United States will be held at 8 p. m. at the Officers Club, Fort Myer.

Half-Starved Cattle Roaming Washington Streets in 1800 Gave Embryo Capital a Distinctly Bush-League Atmosphere

By Alexander R. George
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Federal Government "took to the woods" 150 years ago this spring, moving from fashionable Philadelphia to "the wilderness city" that was Washington.

On May 15, 1800, President John Adams ordered the executive departments (some 150 officials and clerks and 12 boxes of Government archives) to move to the new Federal City in the "Territory of Columbia." Congress had voted in 1790 to make the Territory, later the District of Columbia, the permanent seat of the national government.

Government officials and clerks made the trip by stage coach, carriage or horseback. The 140-mile overland journey between the two towns then took the better part of three days.

Government records packed in seven large boxes and five small boxes were shipped on a packet sloop down the Atlantic coast, up Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River. Documents of the State Department included the original Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Articles of Confederation.

Population Then 3000

The new Capital's population was 3000, a small fraction of the number of sesquicentennial celebration visitors who now daily invade this Capital City of 1,400,000.

Washington was having a housing shortage in 1800. A survey showed there were 253 frame and 109 brick dwellings in the town. Secretary of the Treasury Wolcott, upon arrival here, reported:

"I do not see how members of Congress can possibly secure lodgings unless they will consent to live 10 or 20 in one house. There are few houses in any one place and most of them are small and miserable huts."

The Congress House (Capitol), President's Palace (White House) and original Treasury building were near enough completion to provide accommodations for part of the offices. Houses were leased for the State, War, Navy and Post-office Departments.

Pennsylvania ave., connecting the President's Palace and the Congress House, was a dirt road which a writer of the time said was "bordered by the forest primeval and swamps." The Avenue's dust, suffocating in dry weather, became "a great bog" after a rain.

"How Could I Deserve It!"

A European diplomat took one look at the new Capital City and said: "What have I done to be condemned to such a place?"

A visitor from England wrote that "half-starved cattle browsing among the bushes of the city present a melancholy spectacle . . . so very thinly is the city peopled, quail and other birds are shot within 100 yards of the Capitol."

Members of Congress lived two and three to a room in boarding houses. They swatted with kerchiefs at flies which came from nearby livery stables to bite the long-stockinged legs of the legislators.

New York's Senator Governeur Morris wrote in sardonic vein:

"It's the best city in the world—for a future residence. We want nothing here but houses, cellars, kitchens, well-informed men, amiable women and other little trifles of this kind to make our city perfect."

Thomas Moore, the Irish poet, visited Washington in 1804 and wrote this verse:

This embryo Capital where fancy sees
Squares in morasses, obelisks in trees
Which second-sighted seers even now adorn
With shrines unbuilt and heroes yet unborn.

Bewigged Government executives tried to keep an elegant appearance in their primitive surroundings. Hair-dressing shops on Pennsylvania ave. featured large cupboards, with glass doors, containing freshly-dressed wigs for the daily visits of their owners.

Most of the labor in the District of Columbia was done by Negro slaves who were leased by slave dealers for $60 a year. It cost persons who hired a slave an additional $35 a year to furnish his clothes and food, the latter consisting mostly of salt pork and Indian meal.

When President Adams and his wife Abagail celebrated their first Christmas in the White House it was an "uncompleted palace hard by the Potomac swamps." Mrs. Adams had the family wash hung in the great audience room (East Room) on the first floor.

President Adams, however, had a nifty Christmas garb consisting of a black velvet suit, silk stockings, silver knee and shoe buckles and white waistcoat. His hair was powdered.

The Government's expenditures in the year 1800 totaled $10,786,000, less than one tenth of the Government's daily expenditures now. The Treasury that year had a surplus of $62,000.

Most of the Federal revenue was obtained from import duties. However, the Government levied internal taxes on land, dwellings and slaves, on stills, distilled spirits, refined sugar and "pleasurable" carriages.

Washington then was almost at the center of the narrow union of 16 States. George Washington had envisioned the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and the Potomac River connecting West and East in the most practicable route to the Atlantic Ocean.

As people poured westward there was almost constant clamor to move the Capital west of the Alleghanies. However, the coming of the telegraph and the railroads did much to lessen the demands for a new site for the Capital.

Each Party Blasts Utah Press 'Bias' In Favor of Other

Salt Lake City, May 7 (U.P.).—The Utah Democratic State Reorganization Convention and the Republican County Nominating Convention yesterday accused the press of bias in favor of the other party.

State GOP Chairman A. Pratt Kesler said that "whereas newspapers in other parts of the country expose Democratic Senator Elbert D. Thomas as one of the top Communist sympathizers in the United States Senate, nothing like that has appeared in the local press."

Meanwhile, at the State Democratic Convention, Chairman Grant McFarlane told delegates that the favorable publicity given Gov. J. Bracken Lee is "inaccurate." He specifically complained that the local press doesn't blame Lee's Republican administration for bad roads in the State but that it did blame the Democratic administration when that part yheld the governorship.

Antamine Claims Hit

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday accused Groves Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis, of making "false and misleading" claims about the value of Antamine in fighting colds.

Handicapped Lobby For Aid Bill Passage

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Seventeen persons met at the Burlington Hotel last night to discuss a two-way program of lobbying for the handicapped.

As Roger Arnett, a commercial grower of flowers, you've come from Columbus, Ind., to inform your government of the legislation you want put into effect.

Or you're Frank S. Riordan, a politics-discussing lawyer from Lansford, Pa. Or the name is Goldwater—Mr. and Mr. Leonard Goldwater—from New York City.

The discussion is based on the needs of the handicapped. Case histories are cited, statistics are quoted, and the word "handicap" is used often.

But all this is done with the greatest detachment, a curious detachment.

And as it turns out it's the detachment of experts.

Roger Arnett as the operator of a "gladiolus farm" is also a man paralyzed from the hips, and with one leg amputated. Lawyer Riordan has part of only one hand left; the other hand is prosthetic—a device rather than bone and muscle.

Goldwater, a statistician for the New York State Department of Labor, is a victim of muscle distrophy. Mrs. Goldwater was a textile designer—of ties and other things—and uses crutches with adeptness.

They and the others in the room were told what they are to do in the next two days by Paul A. Strachan, president of the American Federation of Physically Handicapped.

Today, Strachan said he and Riordan and Arnett, as national vice presidents, will testify before a special Senate Labor and Public Welfare subcommittee on bills for the handcapped.

Meantime, the others—plus those due to arrive here today—will visit House members studying the same bills.

Very clearly, Strachen told his audience of the situations they will face. He emphasized that the bill favored by the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped must be adopted. He pounded the table at times. He became sarcastic at others.

Strachan has been deaf for some time now. He lip-reads so well you'd scarcely know it.

Most of those who will come before Congressmen have jobs—even if it's like Eli Sherman, of New York. Trained as an architectural draftsman, he's employed as a statistics clerk.

"Muscular distrophy, Goldmark said with arch humor, "is supposed to be progressive and incurable. Yet here I am."

On Big Stage

Vienna (Va.) Ready for Spring Fete

Vienna, Va., citizens put the finishing touches on a 50-foot stage in the town's new recreation park yesterday in preparation for a spring festival Saturday.

The woodland theater is to be the scene of the festival, sponsored by the Vienna Recreation Association, to begin at 1 p. m. Saturday, with a field meet for children of the Vienna Elementary School, including a baseball game.

At 4:15 p. m. there will be a concert by the United States Air Forces Band from Bolling Field Air Base, directed by CWO Frank Weirauch.

A family picnic will start at 5:30, with free coffee provided by the association. Families will bring their own lunches but hog dogs, soft drinks and ice cream will be sold to help defray expenses of the event.

A variety program will be presented starting at 7:30 p. m. on the new stage.

In case of rain, the entire performance will be held in the Vienna School. Admission is free. Sidney Gottlieb is chairman of the festival committee.

First Family Leaves on 16-State Tour

Truman Opens Western Tour

Truman's "nonpolitical" intentions. The first of nine major speeches will be delivered during a 40-minute pause in Lincoln, Nebr., Monday night.

Since the day's stumping will be through the heart of the Corn Belt, which helped turn the tide for him two years ago, Mr. Truman's major effort Monday is expected to be a farm speech. All aboard will be surprised if he doesn't plug for the Brannan Plan.

Mr. Truman's eight remaining major speeches on the 10-day trip may run the gamut of the Fair Deal programs but only his final in Chicago on May 15 has been announced as avowedly political.

In fact, he has been under pressure from some Capitol Democrats to hold the entire trip on a "high level," in keeping with the seriousness of cold war strains.

It he does, the 1948 roles of Mr. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey would be just reversed. For Dewey is now slugging with all he has at what he calls Mr. Truman's "Faro Deal."

Republicans have not only received radio time for Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio) to reply to the President's frankly political Chicago speech, but they will be waiting for news from the whistle stops.

If he "pours it on" as of old from the rear platform, at nearly three score scheduled stops, they have arranged to strike back in kind.

Republicans may even bait him into a slugfest. Few who know the President expect him to turn his other cheek to GOP Chairman Guy George Gabrielson's parting slap. Gabrielson called him "our commuting President," termed his trip a "quarter-million-dollar junket" and dared him to answer 10 outright political questions.

Not the least of Mr. Truman's problems as he crosses 16 States in his 6000-mile tour to Grand Coulee and back is how to help his party return a Democratic Congress without taking sides between candidates in the Democratic primaries.

Rival contestants will be out to meet him at many of the stops, each seeking special mark of favor. Mr. Truman's problem will be how to keep everybody happy without showing preference.

Aware of the difficulty, he told a press conference Thursday he will be very careful in States where there is a primary contest. He said he will greet all public officials politely, and try to be as neutral and fair as possible with party rivals.

Besides the Truman family and the Wallgrens, the following Administration staff was aboard the train as it pulled out of Union Station:

Matthew J. Connelly and Charles G. Ross, presidential secretaries; Charles S. Murphy, special counsel; Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide; Admiral Robert L. Denison, naval aide; Brig. Gen. Robert B. Landry, Air Force aide; Comdr. Horace D. Warden, USN; George M. Elsey, administrative assistant; David Bell, special assistant; Miss Rose Conway, personal secretary; Jack Romagna, official stenographer; Miss Myrtle Bergheim, Miss Alma Eichinger, Mrs. Lillian Dennison and Mrs. Collette Kennedy, staff secretaries; Dewey E. Long, communications chief; Lieut. Comdr. William Rigdon, USN; William Bray, assistant to the Secretary of Treasury, and John Beardley, chief messenger.

Evacuated with them were the 150 old people at the sisters' home and 150 orphans.

The fire swept the sisters' convent, burned the nurses' residence near the hospital, destroyed the old Rimouski Seminary and left the new seminary severally damaged.

The Cathedral stood safe tonight, although it was blackened by the nearness of flames and the cross on top of it was twisted by wind and heat.

During the day, as the fire continued its march and approached Rimouski courthouse adn jail, 43 prisoners, chained together, were led to safety.

The blaze ate away the wooden flooring on a steel bridge across the Rimouski River, interrupting traffic on the main south-shore highway through Rimouski to the Gaspe Peninsula.

Red Cross authorities in Montreal called the fire "a disaster of major proportions" and announced that immediate aid is being sent here.

Calls for assistance went out to towns along the Canadian National Railways line. Firefighting crews came here from Riviere du Loup, 60 miles away; from nearby Mont Joli, and from Causapscal, in the Matapedia Valley.

The army organized the dispatch of troops from the famous Royal Twenty-second Regiment into Rimouski and began setting up a wireless sending unit to facilitate communications with Montreal.

son, who was riding in the car, nor Burgess was injured.

Both drivers will be summoned for a hearing in the Corporation Counsel's office. No date has been set.

Mrs. Gowin suffered a fractured jaw, possible skull fracture and multiple abrasions. Mrs. Dupre suffered lacerations to the face and head and possible skull fracture. Her husband, Joseph, suffered cuts and bruises.

Two traffic deaths in the District Saturday night raised the fatality toll here to 27 for the year.

Three persons were injured, one seriously about 8:25 a. m. yesterday in a head-on crash on Route 1 in front of the Groveton, Va., Baptist Church.

The accident happened when a car driven by Austin Carter, 50, of 405 P st. nw., traveling south, collided head-on with an auto operated by Dr. Edgar A. Warfield, Lorton, Va., pharmacist, who was going north.

Carter suffered a fractured skull, crushed chest and a broken left leg. At Alexandria Hospital his condition was listed as critical.

Philip Howard, 60, who gave his address as 1137 Summers rd. se., Prince Georges County, received cuts and bruises. Because of a heart condition Howard was listed as in a serious condition. Howard's wife, Nettie, 62, suffered minor injuries as did Dr. Warfield. Neither was hospitalized. Warfield operates a pharmacy in Alexandria.

Five of the nine area residents killed Saturday died in a three-car collision near Elkridge, Md. They included William Henry Lewis, 53, of 9928 Grayson ave., Silver Spring; his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Q. Lewis, 59; their niece, Madeline McFadden, 10, who lived with them; Staff Sergt. Earl C. Schramp of Andrews Base, and Corp. Carl E. Moline, also of Andrews.

Killed in the District were Mrs. Nellie Allene Strother, of 723 21st st. ne. and Robert Graham, 50, of 3315 17th st. nw.

Two deaths were recorded in a tangle of an automobile, a tractor-trailer truck and a motorcycle just north of Stafford, Va. The victims were: Cosby Clayton Breeden, 23, of Richmond, and Edwin Ryan Hall, 26, also of Richmond.

Robert Graham, 50, of 3315 17th st. nw., who was killed when struck by an auto Saturday night, yesterday was identified as the son of a former Congressman and judge.

Graham's father, who died in 1937, was William Johnson Graham, a Republican Representative from Illinois from 1917 to 1924. He resigned to accept appointment as presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals here.

Hospital Day To Be Marked Here Friday

Washington area hospitals this Friday will observe the 29th annual National Hospital Day with special activities to show the public something of hospital life.

The date, May 12, was first chosen in 1921 as appropriate, since it honors the birthday of Florence Nightingale, whose pioneer nursing during the Crimean War led to improvements of the hospital systems in Europe and America.

Friday's schedule of Hospital Day activities, as announced by the Hospital Council of the National Capital area, include.

Open house, 2 to 4 p. m.: Alexandria, Casualty, Emergency, Episcopal, Georgetown, Sibley, Suburban.

Arlington, conducted tours and movies, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Children's third annual "Coffee and Doughnuts" party (by invitation), 8:30 to 9:30 a. m. Open house, 2 to 4 p. m.

Columbia, conducted tours and refreshments, 10 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and 3 to 4:30 p. m.

Freedmen's, tours, exhibits and preview of new cardiovascular laboratory, 1:30 to 4 p. m.

Gallinger Municipal, conducted tours, exhibits, 2 to 5 p. m. Talks by District Commissioners, 2 p. m.

Garfield Memorial, tours, 3 to 5 p. m.

George Washington, tours, 2:30 to 4 p. m.

Mount Alto Veterans, open house, 2 to 5 p. m., demonstration by Girl Cadet Drill Team, Anacostia High School, and band music by Anacostia High School Band preceding address at 3:15 p. m. by Dr. Paul B. Magnusen, Veterans' Administration chief of medicine and surgery. Tea at 4.

Barkley Has No Fear That U. S. Heads for Socialism, Statism

Vice President Alben W. Barkley said yesterday he has no fears that Administration policies are leading to socialism or "statism."

He recalled in a radio interview he was labeled a Socialist in 1912 for advocating Federal aid to road-building. He was running for Congress at the time. The program has been the law of the land since the Wilson Administration.

"The complexity of our lives, due to the multiple inventions of our people that have changed the modes and conventions of our lives and thinking, have made it necessary for the Government to take cognizance of and participate in many activities that a half century or a century ago were not necessary," Barkley said.

Such programs as social security, soil conservation, flood control, rural electrification, aid to education and higher standards for colleges and teachers are "not socialism" or even "trends toward socialism," he asserted.

Barkley gave a glimpse of how cabinet meetings are conducted.

"Meetings are essentially directed by the President himself," he said. "He presides over them. If he has any important matter which he wishes to bring before the Cabinet for discussion first, he does so and seeks the opinion and advice and counsel of the various members of the Cabinet, including the Vice President.

"If there is no such initial matter for him to bring before the Cabinet, he goes around the table to each Cabinet member as they rank at the Cabinet table—the Secretary of State being first—and requests each to bring up anything he wishes to in regard to his department or the subject matter of his activities . . . "

Marriage Proves No Bar To Veep's Queen-Kissing

Vice President Barkley said yesterday marriage has not kept him from following the "unbroken rule" that any man who crowns a queen is expected to kiss her.

As for his wife, he said on a broadcast:

"Since I have been married my charming, gracious and liberal-minded wife hasn't complained either—but she had been on hand when it happened to see that it didn't go too far."

May Festivals Slated This Month At 5 Playgrounds

Rankin Suggests Show of Atom Power

On Remington

Group Hears Witness in Secret Today

By the United Press

The House Committee on Un-American Activities will meet with a secret witness today in its investigation of charges that William W. Remington, Commerce Department economist, once was a member of the Communist Party.

Kenneth McConnell, former Communist organizer in Tennessee, and Howard Allen Bridgman, also an ex-Red, have testified Remington became a party member in 1937 when he was a 19-year-old messenger for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Remington has testified under oath that the charge is not true and that he never has been a Communist.

Elizabeth Bentley, Remington's first accuser, testified Saturday at a closed committee session. Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.) said her testimony probably will be released early this week.

Remington sued Miss Bentley for $100,000 for calling him a Communist two years ago. The case was settled out of court for a reported $10,000.

At that time, Remington was suspended temporarily from his Commerce Department job. He later was cleared by the Loyalty Review Board and reinstated in a "non-sensitive" post.

Haitian Cabinet Resigns

Port au Prince, Haiti, May 7 (AP).—The Haitian Cabinet resigned today, after facing senate opposition to a government demand for constitutional revision that would allow a presidential reelection.

Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) would like occasionally to "blow some useless island off the face of the earth just to let the world know we're prepared," he said yesterday.

The Congressman urged this measure in a program for world prosperity which he offered several hundred people at the fifteenth commemorative observance at the District World War Memorial in West Potomac Park.

"I'm for building up the strongest Air Force the world has even known," he said.

"I'm for keepin' plenty of atom bombs," he continued. "When we do that we might go out and blow some useless island off the face of the earth just to let the world know we're prepared.

"Then," the Congressman added, "we won't have another Pearl Harbor. We must not have another Pearl Harbor."

The U. S., with all the resources and "the finest people the world has ever known," should make itself the most powerful nation the world has ever known, Rankin declared.

Then, if the world will follow America's precept and example, Rankin predicted, "the world will go into the greatest period of prosperity it has ever known."

"Let me say to me, I'm for America first—and I'm not willing to subordinate my country to any United Nations, either," Rankin shouted emphatically.

Rankin, chairman of the House Veterans Committee, had no apology for his efforts on behalf of veterans.

"Some people say John Rankin is always wasting money on veterans," he said, "but that's a whole lot better than pouring it down the sinkholes of Europe, Asia, Israel or Africa without any prospect of return."

On loyalty, Rankin said he considered a refusal to answer queries about Communist associations on the grounds of self-incrimination as a confession of disloyalty to America.

About 34 veteran and patriotic groups laid floral wreaths at the memorial during the ceremony.

A special wreath was placed in memory of the late Frank B. Noyes, president of the Evening Star Newspaper Co. and chairman of the memorial's founding commission.

The Marine Band and Miss Hilda G. Nelson provided music for the observance, which was sponsored by the District of Columbia World War Memorial and May Day Corporation. Chairman William T. Slattery presided.

Scientist Tells Of Passport Lifting

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

EDWARD M. CORSON, of Chicago, who has acted as a consultant for the Atomic Energy Commission, yesterday blamed "allegations of a personal nature" for the State Department's lifting of his passport Thursday in New York. The State Department had called Corson's proposed trip to France "not in the national interest" access to FBI files and the records of various other Government intelligence agencies.

Speaking at Janesville, Wis., yesterday, McCarthy repeated his demand for FBI files and charged that some of the State Department loyalty folders already have been stripped. He said one file in particular, covering an unnamed United States Minister abroad, has been "thoroughly raped."

Neither Tydings nor McMahon could immediately be reached in Washington for comment.

McCarthy declared the minister was a "foreign agent" and said the missing file would prove it to the Senate subcommittee investigating his charges of communism in the State Department if it was found and made available.

The case he referred to was the second of 81 he outlined to the Senate on February 20. He said then that "a major portion" of the file had been removed.

Tydings said the State Department records actually contain "a vast amount of material that the FBI has amassed and turned over to the State Department and put into the files."

Kronenwetter, 'Red' Town's Mayor, Dies

Wausau, Wis., May 7 (U.P.)—Mayor Ralph Kronenwetter of Mosinee, Wis., died here last night of a cerebral hemorrhage he suffered at the climax of his town's mock Communist "revolution."

The 49-year-old official had never recovered consciousness since he was stricken Monday night. Doctors at St. Mary's Hospital here had given up hope for his life last Wednesday.

Mr. Kronenwetter had just stepped from a car at an outdoor rally in Mosinee when he complained of dizziness and asked to be driven home. He was paralyzed and unconscious by the time he got there.

He was to have officially taken back the reins of his town's government at the rally, ending Communist rule.

Mr. Kronenwetter had been an enthusiastic participator in the mock invasion. Bogus shock troops had yanked him out of bed that morning and put him under "arrest." His doctor said the excitement and exertion probably contributed to his collapse.

Three Dead in Coastal Squalls

New York, May 7 (U.P.)—Gale-like winds and a sudden squall whipped East Coast waters today from New York to New England, causing the death of three persons and heavy property damage.

The squall, with winds that reached gusts of 50 miles an hour, threw pleasure boaters into choppy seas. At least 19 persons were rescued by police and the Coast Guard off the Bronx, after their small craft were overturned in Long Island Sound. One child was missing and presumed dead and an undetermined number of others were plucked from the sound by private boats.

In New England, the windstorm caused the death of a father and son when their fishing boat was capsized in Meredith Bay off New Hampshire. Six others in three rowboats were reported missing off Revere, Mass., and a Coast Guard boat and plane were searching for them.

Eight others were missing and believed drowned since Friday in boating accidents in upstate New York.

The storm struck as New Englanders and New Yorkers took advantage of the first real spring Sunday with temperatures in the 70s.

Some 100 small craft were on Long Island Sound off the Bronx and Port Washington when the squall hit. At least 20 boats were overturned.

Up from apprentice to big job!

Jack B.Twine, Jr., Norfolk, Va., rose from apprentice rigger to dockmaster at 33. Did it on his own . . . by learning everything he could around the shipyard. "You bet I'm making my own security," he says. "In America, that's always been the best way!"

Creating his own Security!

WITH JACK TWINE—and millions of Americans like him—it's this way:

He makes the most of opportunities.
He writes his own ticket to security.
He earns and pays for real security.

Jack wants a kind of personal security Government can't provide. Government has to base its plan on general rather than on individual specifications.

Jack wants his security plan tailored to his own and his family's needs.

So Jack, and 80 million Americans who believe as he does, look to life insurance for security plans drawn up to meet their individual specifications. Because no two families are alike, the life insurance companies equip their agents to analyze individual needs and recommend the right kind of protection to fit each family.

There are 150,000 experienced agents giving this personal help today. They are experts in showing individual families how to build their own security. This is one service of life insurance.

Giant FOOD DEPARTMENT STORES

Giant Food Department Stores
P. O. Box 1804
Washington 13, D. C.

Dear Sirs:

Your specifications for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef are most rigid, and a lot goes on behind the scenes to produce and select the small percentage of cattle that will meet your exacting specifications.

BREEDING Only certain pure strain breeds of cattle will efficiently convert corn and other feeds into GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef.

FEEDING It takes many months of scientific feeding on a diet principally of corn to produce GIANT TOP-NOTCH quality.

BUYING It takes qualified livestock buyers, with years of experience, to recognize GIANT TOP-NOTCH quality in cattle on the hoof.

PROCESSING Extensive facilities are necessary for converting these cattle into GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef to retain all of the quality and goodness that the producer has painstakingly built into the cattle with many months of careful feeding.

SELECTION To the eye of the expert beef grader, who makes the final selection of GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef, this quality is indicated by "marbling", "covering" and "finish" -- referring to the distribution of fat through the red meat and the texture of the meat.

We selected our Omaha and Sioux City plants as the primary source of supply for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef as these plants are located in the heart of the corn country and, throughout the year, their receipts of the best grades of cattle will be more consistent than other markets.

Proof of the rigidity of your specifications for GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef is best indicated by the fact that, in the total production of cattle at Omaha, only 15 out of every 100 would be acceptable for GIANT TOP-NOTCH selection; at Sioux City, only 14 out of every 100 would be acceptable. OF THE COMBINED PRODUCTION AT ALL ARMOUR PLANTS, ONLY 12 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOULD BE ACCEPTABLE FOR GIANT TOP-NOTCH.

Our 80 years of experience in the beef business is an insurance policy that underwrites the quality of every cut of GIANT TOP-NOTCH Beef produced in Armour plants.

Yours very truly,
P. A. Greene

U. S. Department of Agriculture quotations on western dressed meats show that each grade, whether "good" or "choice," has a wholesale price difference as high as 4c a pound. Therefore, if it is possible to pay as much as 4c a pound difference for the same grade, there must be a difference in quality! GIANT always pays "top" price to be sure of getting the grade's TOP quality. That accounts for the great popularity of GIANT meats.

Devotion To A Fetish

Representative J. Glenn Beall of Maryland has got himself onto a shaky platform by refusing to sign the District home-rule discharge petition. Mr. Beall says that he voted for the Auchincloss home-rule bill in the last Congress, the forerunner of the Kefauver bill now bottled up in the House District Committee. Presumably he believes in representative government or he would not be a member of Congress. He was elected on the Republican ticket and presumably embraced the pledge of home rule for the District in the Republican platform. He believes in reestablishing suffrage here, at least the right to vote in presidential elections and for a District delegate in Congress. That in itself would seem to necessitate, by the sheer force of logic, the establishment of a local government through which the people could attain elementary experience in political affairs. Yet he balks at doing his part to push the home-rule bill through the House.

The chief reason Mr. Beall gives for this strange behavior is that he is a member of the District Committee and thinks it would be unfair to take the bill out of the committee's hands. But this is making a fetish out of committee prerogatives. As a member of the committee, Mr. Beall ought to know how urgently home rule is needed. He ought to know how much precious congressional time is lost by forcing petty local measures through the House and Senate. We cannot help thinking that for a man to throw his influence against the achievement of these urgent reforms is a grave mistake in judgment. Since it was Mr. Beall's own constituents, the Montgomery County League of Women Voters, that urged him to help end the District Committee's tyrannical blockade of the home-rule bill, his curious concept of his duty as a representative of the people may well be an issue in the forthcoming campaign. It looks as if he has abandoned a principle for a fetish.

Soft Answer

The tone of the second State Department note to the Kremlin concerning the shooting down of a Navy plane with the loss of ten American lives is in some contrast to the first. But it is in even greater contrast to the tone of the Soviet reply.

The note delivered by Ambassador Kirk at Moscow on April 18 was about as stern as diplomatic usage permits. It rejected in toto the Russian version of the affair (that the plane had been intercepted over Soviet territory) and demanded apologies and indemnities for the lives lost. It also insisted that steps be taken to prevent a repetition of such incidents.

The Soviet reply, transmitted April 22, was a masterpiece of calculated insolence. To this insolence the State Department (after the formal presentation of Ambassador Kirk's compliments to Commissar Vishinski) now answers in a tone of mild and gentlemanly expostulation, saying in effect: "Apparently Your Excellency's government does not quite see eye-to-eye with us in this important and serious matter. This is a great pity, because surely Your Excellency must realize that a difference of opinion in a matter of such grave moment might have an infelicitous effect upon the concord of nations, and the continuation of amicable relationships, etc. . . ."

The American note does not accuse Mr. Vishinski of lying; it merely asserts that his account of what happened and where it happened is "not factual." It does not impute disreputable motives to the Soviet government; it merely notes a certain logical discrepancy between the behavior of the Soviet air force in this incident, and the professed devotion of the Soviet government to the cause of peace.

What is the explanation of this contrast in diplomatic manners and language? We can scarcely suppose that the Department of State has received new information which has caused it to soften its former attitude of outrage and indignation. For all its politeness the second note is as insistent as the first upon three points: (1) That the only American plane in the Baltic area on the date of the incident as reported by the Russians was the lost Navy Privateer; (2) that it was unarmed; and (3) that it was "at no time over Soviet or Soviet-occupied territory or territorial waters." If all this was so, there remains the question why the Russians saw fit to attack this particular plane. The most plausible hypothesis is that the crew of the plane were testing some new technical equipment that the Russians wished to capture, or, failing that, to destroy.

In view of the stalemate we may assume that both the Russian and American notes are mainly for the record. The difference of idiom is mainly one in diplomatic fashion; and in this matter we are evidently some decades behind the Russians. A few years ago, a well-known editor, observing the trend of diplomatic behavior, said:

> It used to be that when they wrote, "Accept, my dear Excellency, the assurance of my profound esteem," you could be pretty sure that a declaration of war was already on the way. Now they call each other —— ——s and —— ——s and nothing happens.

"Nonpolitical" Trip

The cross-country trip that President Truman began yesterday is labeled as a "nonpolitical" inspection tour. We suspect, however, that everyone will accept this as a bit of window-dressing. Presidents sometimes travel across the country just to learn what the people are thinking and saying, and an excellent practice it is. In some measure no doubt the present trip will serve that purpose, yet with more than 50 speeches scheduled in 10 days the President will have little time for listening. Taken at any time, such a trip would have to be regarded as political. Coming as this one does at the beginning of the midyear congressional election campaigns, only the most naive could think of it in other than political terms.

The interesting question is what the response of the country will be. Two years ago when the President made his "nonpolitical" tour of 18 States, his favorite subject was the "do nothing" Eightieth Congress. The election returns in November of that year showed that he had made a strong impression on the rank and file during this and similar barnstorming tours. Undoubtedly Mr. Truman is now seeking to repeat that performance. It can scarcely be regarded as an accident that his itinerary will take him into 16 States which account for 12 of the Senate seats in contest this year. Seven of those seats are now occupied by Republicans, and some of these will doubtless have to be captured by Administration supporters if Mr. Truman is to realize his ambition of getting a Congress that will reflect his wishes.

Apparently the Truman technique is to favor candidates who agree with him, without attempting to purge dissidents within his own party. The failure of President Roosevelt's purge in 1938 is indicative of the resentment that presidential interference in State contests may arouse. President Truman wants to convert the people to his Fair Deal and leave it to them to do their own purging. That is undoubtedly good politics, but the difficulty with this sort of campaign is that Mr. Truman now has a Congress dominated by his own party. Its record is similar to that of the Eightieth Congress. Yet it cannot be kicked around on the stump without further weakening the President's own leadership.

One other factor of importance, we suspect, is the increasing awareness on the part of the people that the social improvements promised by the President will mean higher taxes. The country is said to be far more economy conscious than it was two years ago. Will the President meet this issue? There is also the question what will be the effect of the phony issue of communism in the State Department raised by irresponsible Republicans. Difficult as Mr. Truman's task appeared when he began his barnstorming in 1948, therefore, his present effort to elect enough Fair Deal Congressmen to outvote the coalition of Republicans and conservative Southern Democrats may prove to be even more formidable.

Trouble In Guatemala

In view of the vague and undocumented fashion in which Guatemala informally asked the recall of the American Ambassador, Richard C. Patterson, jr., the State Department did well to reject it. Nevertheless, the situation was not helped by Senator Wiley when he sprang to Mr Patterson's defense in a speech the other day and called for "the sternest and most vigorous action" against communism in Guatemala. Among other things, Mr. Wiley suggested the recall of the Guatemalan Ambassador and "stern action" by the Pan American Union. It remained for the Guatemalan Foreign Minister to remind him that it is the Organization of American States, and not the Pan American Union, which is the agency that helps resolve hemisphere differences.

Although Senator Wiley emphasized that he was not a jingoist, his speech waxed pretty shrill. He said in part:

> If a relatively small nation the size of Guatemala can get away with the sort of actions she has indulged in—a nation less than 3½ million people in population—if the Reds there can poke their thumbs in Uncle Sam's eyes, step on Uncle Sam's feet, hurl insults at Uncle Sam, threaten his envoy, in effect practically throw out his envoy on completely unwarranted grounds, then the United States, which pretends to be a leader of the world, can just as well take a back seat in international affairs and can classify herself as a fourth-class power . . . Far more than literary lullabies are necessary in this situation, or else it will lead to a gigantic flop in foreign policy which will go far beyond the disgraceful Chinese debacle wherein we have practically turned all of Asia over to the Reds.

This is pretty strong stuff, the chief result of which is to furnish ammunition to the very forces Mr. Wiley is opposing. The sincerity of Senator Wiley and Ambassador Patterson cannot be doubted, nor can the extensive Communist influence in Guatemala be minimized. Top government leaders are not Communist, but Communist-dominated labor unions are able to exert considerable pressure on the government. Nor can the actions of the government be overlooked. It was named by the Organization of American States, for example, as one of the instigators of trouble in the Caribbean—trouble that was possibly a Communist stratagem; and it slighted the United States recently in the conspicuous failure to play the American national anthem on an appropriate occasion. To these may be added attacks on American business in Guatemala.

Nevertheless, Ambassador Patterson has been a good deal less than diplomatic on some occasions, and his extreme outspokenness has created unnecessary enmities. It cannot be forgotten that Guatemala is in the midst of a presidential race, and anyone with a knowledge of Latin politics knows that the cry of "Yankee imperialism" is virtually irresistible on these occasions. If we respect the right of Guatemala to manage her own affairs, then our objective should be to encourage the moderate elements and at the same time scrupulously avoid anything which forces them into the hands of the Communists. There is no reason to tolerate official insults, but neither in our own interest, is there any reason for foolish bluster.

ECA And The Senate

Under the skillful leadership of Senator Connally the foreign-aid bill came through the Senate unscathed except for the 250-million-dollar cut in authorizations. This concession to demands for economy may slow down the recovery program but should not entail crippling reductions in ECA allocations. Since the House has already authorized expenditures of the same amount as those approved by the Senate, fairly adequate authorization legislation is assured. However, the actual funds required to finance the ECA have to be voted by the appropriations committees as well as the House and Senate. The authorization bill merely puts a ceiling on total expenditures, and quite a number of Senators stressed the fact that there would be another opportunity to reduce the amount of foreign aid at the appropriations stage. This is an unmistakable warning that the battle has not yet been won.

The Senate's tie vote on the Taft amendment to cut the authorization by half a billion dollars provided disturbing evidence of the weakening of bipartisan support for the Administration's foreign-aid policy. For only 6 Republicans voted against this proposal, while 30 Republicans and 10 Democrats approved it. The Republicans also sponsored a series of amendments, fortunately rejected, that would have played havoc with the ECA program. Senator Kem, who wanted to lop a billion dollars off the authorization total, declared that the recovery program was merely another one of a long line of relief measures. Senator Taft and some of his colleagues rang the changes on the need for economy, despite the fact that Administrator Hoffman had asked for a billion dollars less next year and had promised to make further reductions in outlays if possible.

As Senator Connally pointed out, cuts of such size taken away from the European recovery program would be taken away from our own defense. The recovery program is an investment in American security, not a dole handed out to western Europe. Arbitrary and excessive cuts, such as those urged by Senators Kem and Taft, would not be true economies but disguised moves to wreck the foreign-aid program that would cost us heavily in the long run. By helping our allies to rebuild industry and expand trade we may in fact save ourselves the cost of a third World War.

Good Police Work

The apparent solution of the double murder in the Lansburgh Department Store on Good Friday has come as the result of thorough, persistent and detailed police work. From the moment the crime was discovered the police have been tirelessly running down every clue. In their routine check of employes and former employes of the store they had not yet reached William A. Tyler, jr., who has now confessed to the crime, because he had moved from the address listed for him. His name was still on the list of men to be questioned when it came to the attention of police in connection with two other crimes. A druggist's identification of Tyler as the man who had stabbed him furnished the police with an excellent lead. Questioning of Tyler's friends brought additional information, and the use of a lie detector stimulated him to tell the whole ghastly story of the murders.

The community is reechoing Superintendent Barrett's commendation of all the policemen who worked on the case. Some of the 18 officers assigned to the case worked as long as 24 hours a day, and many others contributed to the investigation. The outcome illustrates once more the necessity of widespread teamwork and detailed, systematic checking of every lead. The community is much relieved to have the confessed slayer in custody and thankful to the Police Department for the extraordinary efforts that it put forth.

"Files on Maragon"

Replying to the May 4 letter of the Secretary of Agriculture, counsel in the Maragon case were not on a "fishing expedition" in demanding production of the Allied Molasses files.

There can be no criticism of the Department of Agriculture, or any other Government agency, for refusing to produce confidential files to persons without interest. But when the Government prosecutes, what is available to the prosecutor to establish guilt should be equally available to the defendant to establish innocence. Not only established precedents, but simple justice require this.

The prosecution had offered as a witness an employe of the Department of Agriculture who testified as to certain procedures in the Department of Agriculture and who had "refreshed his recollection" as to dates by consulting the files in question. These dates were an important issue in the case.

When defendant's counsel requested an opportunity to check the relevant portions of the files to determine the accuracy of the testimony of that witness as to the dates, they were met by the prosecutor's contention that the files in question were confidential and not available to the dedefendant by reason of certain departmental regulations. It was only after the court ruled that the pertinent portions of the files would have to be produced that "they were made available by the department."

Economic Imbalance

Dr. J. H. Richter's communication of April 10, "United States Aid and World Economic Imbalance," makes a case for continued large-scale grants to foreign countries and the tentative idea of a United States subsidy to close the dollar gap. If Dr. Richter wishes us to continue large-scale grants, he should have forthcoming a statement of how these grants are to be implemented and to what end.

Our especial role is to rebuild the European economy, to enable foreign production to attain prewar levels or more, but this must be done with ourselves as the bankers and executives. We cannot beat down foreign production with our present swollen output. Prohibitive tariffs must come down, and we must consume a much greater percentage of foreign goods.

The indecision of the Democratic Party has led the national economy into a dangerous overextension because of its lack of an objective. Foreign markets are to a peacetime economy what supply lines are to a military one, but our foreign markets, dollar-hungry as they are, still are satiated with American goods which they cannot afford to buy even with our money.

The only alternative, because of the indiscriminate mass production, is an introverted economy and national disaster. The law of supply and demand cannot function as a coordinate in the face of abnormal production, and no downward price adjustment, which now seems inevitable, is likely to occur without a financial crisis.

The conflict in policy between our need to restore European production and our need to produce goods at an ever-accelerated rate to prevent the collapse of our monetary system may lead to an impasse which can be resolved only by World War III. Our production has become a dead weight on the political structure, and, no matter what expedient we may choose to rid ourselves of the mass, it will be useless unless there is a Federal control of agricultural and industrial production.

EUSTACE MULLINS.

McCarthy's "Facts"

Senator McCarthy has made so many irresponsible charges that the public has possibly lost track of the main charge originally made by Senator McCarthy. The Congressional Record of April 25 clarifies this.

Some weeks ago, Senator McCarthy began his attack upon the State Department and Secretary Acheson with a speech in Wheeling, W. Va., in which he stated: "While I have not the time to name all the Communists in the State Department, I have here in my hand a list of 205 names who are card-carrying members of the Communist Party, who are now in the State Department and who are known to Acheson."

In the Senate on April 25, Senator McCarthy finally revealed his source for that statement. It was a letter from Secretary of State Byrnes, dated July 26, 1946. Secretary Byrnes explained that at the end of the war some 4000 employes had been transferred to the Department of State from various war agencies. He stated: "The case histories of approximately 3000 have been subjected to a preliminary examination, as a result of which a recommendation against permanent employment has been made in 284 cases by the screening committee . . . Of the 284 individuals who have been the subject of adverse recommendation . . . the services of 79 have been terminated."

This was in 1946, almost four years ago. Senator McCarthy did not bother to check as to how many of the remaining 205 are still in the department. He did not bother to find out how many of the 205 had subsequently resigned or been dismissed in the four years which have elapsed. He did not bother to check whether any of the 205 had subsequently been cleared on full investigation.

Wisconsin's Shame

I feel certain that many men and women of Wisconsin join with me in being gratified over the report carried in Marquis Childs' column of May 3 that Robert La Follette may be induced to re-enter Wisconsin politics. Voters from every State should be able to stand more erect after reading the news of the beginning of a move in the Senate chamber to cleanse its membership of McCarthy. We have been waiting for that move to be initiated by the Republicans, since McCarthy (I cannot bring myself to call him Senator) occupies a Republican seat held for so long by men whose name itself became synonymous for personal integrity and devotion not to factional interests, nor even to State advancement, but to national welfare.

McCarthy's wanton display of immorality has brought to many natives of Wisconsin shame as keen as personal grief. Our shame is the more bitter that our perhaps overweening pride in statecraft has been brought to ground by an ignoramus.

Boxing Commission

There are two bills in the legislative hopper of Congress which if enacted into law to defeat the aspirations of the colored citizenry of Washington will be the most pernicious legislation that has happened for many a year. At present membership on the Boxing Commission requires that the appointee be a resident of this city. Since the Boxing Commission civilian members are eligible for salaries it is not possible under the District code to draw salaries from different sources. The two bills that have cleared the McMillan subcommittee would abolish these provisions. Colored citizens believe these bills are proposed to enable a retired policeman, a resident of Virginia, to live in Virginia and draw retirement pay and pay of a civilian appointee to the commission.

Why has the boxing commission been operating for nearly a year since the death of the late Mr. Morgan with a vacancy? Is it because of the hope that Congress will pass the laws that will make the retiring police member eligible for reappointment?

Last year, so anxious were the District Commissioners to keep the boxing commission active, they reappointed the members of the commission six months prior to the date of expiration of their terms. Yet this year a vacancy has been allowed to exist for more than six months.

Transit Passes

In arguing that the weekly passes cannot be retained because rides on passes are too numerous compared with other riders, the Capital Transit Co. I believe is taking advantage of a hidden "joker" in its figures.

It compares total "rides on passes" with total "rides on cash fares and tokens," instead of with total "rides on cash fare, tokens and transfers"; although there is no reason for imagining that a pass rider uses any fewer cars or buses for a journey than any other rider uses.

Also, in reckoning the "number of cars and buses used per paid fare or token," we must not overlook that many who get transfers (a) use them on more than one other bus or car and (b) do not have the transfers collected and turned in by the drivers (who, in the company's interests, never neglect to record mechanically every instance where a pass is presented).

Food for China

Regarding the apparent disdain of some legislators toward doing anything about the China famine, they are overlooking two important points. One is the obvious humanitarian necessity of sending some of our gigantic stockpile of surplus commodities to the 20 million-plus starving Chinese. This should be done regardless of the shipping costs involved and the complicated economic implications.

The other, and more politically appealing, element is that of the tremendous psychological influence such a program would produce on the entire population of China. The Nationalists despise us because of experience, the Communists because of doctrine. But the joint admiration of both can be secured if a program of this sort is initiated and prosecuted intelligently either by Americans or through a third state with American authority.

Resources And Progress

A Communication

DR. J. H. RICHTER writes in his communication published April 10, of ". . . one thought which might subconsciously play a role in the attitude of some American economists and policymakers: it is the idea that an outflow of funds from the United States to the rest of the world in some way acknowledges the greater endowment of this country with natural resources in relation to population when compared to poorer countries overseas."

American Indians were also in possession of these natural resources. Yet they somehow failed to build up a $250 billion annual-income economy. In this connection, we may point out that the economic problem of the American Indian—a backward people after some 85 years of drainage upon the Federal Treasury—has not been quite solved as yet.

The per capita natural resources of Brazil, Russia, most of Africa, and the Middle East are not less and most probably are more than those of the United States. Yet the inhabitants of these sparsely populated areas are, in general among those with lowest living standards. Certainly such areas as Australia, Argentina, and Canada have per capita more natural resources than the United States.

By "poorer countries overseas" Dr. Richter perhaps means largely those of Europe with which he should be most familiar. The continent of Europe has comparable in size no such poor sandy soil or lack of natural resources as the New England States. Nor does Europe contain vast waterless deserts and wastelands of the Southwestern part of the United States.

Small in size, geographically well located with most favorable climate and coastal arrangements (in contrast with the solid land mass formation of the continental United States), Europe enjoys high or moderate rainfall throughout. Mineral resources of the Iberian Peninsula, Yugoslavia, Alsace-Lorraine, the Ruhr, The Silesians, etc., combined do not make Europe a poor area even relative to its population.

Those who have argued in terms of natural resources as the determinant of economic progress have overplayed their hand. Underlying and implicit in their argument of the natural resources to the population ratio are Malthusian and Neo-Malthusian rigid premises and static relations which leave out the most decisive factor, that is, the dynamics of the state of the art and organization of production. What distinguishes modern society from any other, whether medieval, ancient, primitive or oriental, is its scientific and technological substructure.

It is not coincidental that arguments which assume a rigid relationship between natural resources and population are precisely those put forth by Keynes in his Economic Consequences of the Peace to explain the Russian Revolution, by the Nazis in support of their "Volk ohne Raum," by Italian Fascists and Japanese generals for their adventurous military operations in East Africa and Asia, and by every other expansionist who seeks for a "good reason" to justify aggression.

A HIGH-LIVING prosperous country like Switzerland, whose natural resources are confined to rugged mountains, would seem to invalidate much of the neo-Malthusian theory and its corollaries. The vicious circle of poverty and "over population" if we may be justified to call it so, begins with the low state of the art and organization of production and not with limitations of natural resources or excess of population. A rising standard of living itself is the chief factor in limiting population growth.

Propagation under stagnant or falling standards of living has two indispensable functions: (1) children are substituted for scarce (expensive) and nonexistent factors of production, and (2) grown-up offspring provide parents with old-age security. It must be pointed out also that in view of high mortality rates, the number of offspring has to be sufficiently large to insure a certain minimum number to survive—the most hardy ones.

From these facts we can readily deduce that a birth-control program (advocated by the Foreign Policy Association in its Headline series, January and February, 1950) to improve the lot of people is even more ineffective and impractical than equalization of population pressure by its redistribution.

The technical aid program under Point IV when coupled with a disinflationary program would seem the only alternative that can introduce a sufficiently dynamic element among some two thirds of world population that is existing in a state of semi-animation and appalling poverty.

Now that the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. (Arnold Lines) is charging a higher zone fare in nearby Virginia and a so-called reduced zone fare within each zone, isn't it about time that coach company provided a zone chart designating the applicable fare within and between each zone for the information of their riders?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Trial Balloon

WHAT THE President had to say about economy in the military budget will lead to some rather difficult conversations when Mr. Acheson meets our Atlantic allies next week. For they are going to tell him that they cannot pay for the program which has been drawn up by their military leaders. They are going to tell him that we are now contributing something like one-seventh of the military expenditures of western Europe, and that if the program of their leaders is to be carried out, our military aid will have to be—at a minimum—twice as big for next year as for this year.

Lippmann

Even that would not, however, meet the military problem of western Europe unless in addition we went far beyond anything now publicly discussed in underwriting the French position in Indo-China. For the core of the European defense army is to be a French ground army; and, as it happens, the core of the existing French army today is pinned down by the guerillas in Indo-China.

THERE IS, therefore, a big contradiction between the President's wish to stabilize our own military budget at the present level and the rising costs of the European defense which we have encouraged and are sponsoring. It is bound to lead to a deep and comprehensive reconsideration of the military policy of the Atlantic nations.

One line of inquiry might start with the fact that modern armaments have become so intolerably expensive to produce and maintain that most nations—even great powers like Britain and France—cannot afford them. Yet nations like Britain and France cannot remain great and independent if they are unarmed, and they cannot play their indispensable part in the world if permanently their only defense is the protection which the United States can give them.

The problem posed in this line of inquiry is whether without exorbitant and ruinous expenditures, Britain and France could in the near future increase their own military importance in Europe, and their own feeling of security and independence.

IT IS just possible that there is a way to do this, and that it may—if on consideration it becomes a policy—mark the third phase of the atomic age. Phase One was that of the American monopoly. Phase Two, which is the present, the American monopoly is broken. But it is broken only by the Russians. The two giant powers alone have atomic weapons: no one else has the weapons or any defense against them.

Therefore all Europe is tending more and more—as it realizes the situation—to see itself as the defenseless victim of a war in which it can play no decisive part. This is in the highest degree demoralizing and dangerous to any kind of constructive harmony and development.

NOW IF in Phase One there was one atomic power, if in Phase Two there were two rival atomic powers, then it may be that in Phase Three there ought to be several atomic powers—beginning obviously with Great Britain and France.

Supposing that it were decided to be the wisest course, it is, I believe, quite within our resources to provide Britain and France with atomic armaments sufficient to make them count again and quite soon as great military powers in the European balance of power.

It is probably easier for us to do that than it is for us to underwrite, or for them to recruit and support, the conventional military forces which are now being discussed.

THE MATHEMATICS of atomic warfare are very different from the mathematics of conventional warfare. Thus to have only 50 divisions if you have to fight 200 divisions is to be virtually unarmed. But any nation which has 50 atomic bombs and some very fast planes which are difficult to intercept can talk back with considerable confidence to a nation which has 200 atomic bombs.

On this principle Phase Three of the atomic age might be opened by the distribution from the American stockpile of atomic weapons to Great Britain and to France. This action might prove to be as revolutionary an event in favor of the West as the Soviet achievement of the bomb was revolutionary to the disadvantage of the West. The power to make this distribution, the power to decide whether to make it, lies wholly in the United States. Thus the initiative is ours, if we choose after full consideration to exercise it, in a matter which would greatly affect quickly the balance of power in Europe.

I HOPE the reader will not regard this as anything more than what it is: an interesting proposal which is worth examining.

Peasants Meet Today to Lay Out Anti-Red Strategy

Representatives of nine Iron Curtain countries will gather here today for the annual congress of the International Peasant Union, the "Green Internationale," which Moscow dreads.

Behind the Iron Curtain its members are in prison or underground. Many of its leaders lie in unmarked graves. They died by the noose or the firing squad after hasty "trials" for "espionage" or "treason" or other "crimes" for not bowing to the Communist yoke.

Their congress, at the National Press Club, will be devoted largely to plans for the day when the nations of eastern Europe will once more be free of Red domination. Their objective is to consolidate the peasant majorities of their nations and help form a "United States of Europe."

President of the union is Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, former prime minister of Poland and leader of anti-Communist opposition.

McCarthy's Victims

By Joseph Alsop

An Open Letter To Senator Tydings

AFTER long hesitation, I am impelled by the appalling effects in Europe of the McCarthy witch hunt to offer my testimony to your committee, for what it may be worth.

I do so for two reasons. First, I have already sharply criticized the conduct of our affairs in China on several occasions. Second, I was intimately involved in the events which led to the loss of China, whereas Senators McCarthy, Wherry and Taft and their informants are offering second-hand evidence. This evidence is so obviously corrupted by political and other pressures that it is a duty to correct the impression conveyed.

Stating the case as briefly as possible, I think it fair to say that the really crucial years in China were those when Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell commanded the China-Burma-India theater, from 1942 to 1944. In this period, Professor Lattimore, who was always at best a fringe figure, played his most important role in our China policy, as a personal adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. In this rather brief assignment, he accomplished nothing, but he was quite obviously loyal both to the American Government and to Generalissimo Chiang.

Professor Lattimore had no part whatever in the real debate about China policy, in which the different points of view have been fantastically misrepresented by Senator McCarthy and his friends. No informed person ever supposed that offering blank checks to the National government of China would accomplish anything. Those who advocated a strong policy of aiding the National government only did so with the proviso that the aid given would be closely controlled by American representatives on the spot, as it was during the short and successful period of General Wedemeyer' command. It should be noted that the congressional advocates of postwar aid to China specifically rejected the responsibility involved in this sort of local, on the spot control, in the first major bill appropriating funds for the purpose during General Marshall's Secretaryship of State.

RETURNING to the vastly more important war period, the other school of thought was composed primarily of General Stilwell and his political advisers. General Stilwell, so far as one could judge, was chiefly animated by his personal detestation of Generalissimo Chiang, arising from their disagreements. His political advisers, among whom was Mr. John Stewart Service, were operating on a more reasoned theory, however.

They asserted, first, that the National government was too feeble and corrupt ever to be reformed, even with direct American help and under direct American pressure. They said, second, that the Chinese Communists were therefore bound to win in the end, no matter what measures might be taken by the United States. In the third place, they argued that the Soviet Union, insofar as it had intervened in China at all, had given all its assistance to the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek rather than to the Communists, who received no tangible Russian aid whatever until the war was over. Fourthly, they suggested that the Chinese Communists might be induced to declare their independence of the Kremlin if they were treated as friends and allies by the United States.

Opening friendly relations and offering aid to the Chinese Communists was frankly admitted, at the time, to be a bold gamble. The gamble now looks better than it did then. On the one hand, the Yugoslav Communists, whose experience was precisely what the experience of the Chinese Communists would have been if they had received American aid, have now rebelled against the Kremlin. On the other hand, the recent behavior of the Japanese Communist leader, Nosaka, a wartime refugee at Yenan and intimate friend of Mao Tse-tung, clearly suggests that the idea of independence of the Kremlin must have been in the air in Communist China in wartime.

MY RIGHT to speak, if I may be said to have a right to speak, derives from the fact that in wartime I was one of the chief American opponents of the school of thought I have summarized above. As a member of the staff of the American Volunteer Group, as chief of the Lend-Lease Mission to China, and finally as an assistant to Dr. T. V. Soong, I did everything in my power to present the pro-Nationalist point of view in influential quarters in Washington.

Those who wished to develop an American policy of friendship toward, and aid to, the Chinese Communists were finally and decisively defeated with the dismissal of General Stilwell, in October, 1944. This occurred many months after I had finally succeeded in getting into uniform, as a member of Gen. C. L. Chennault's staff in the Fourteenth Air Force. But although I had long before become a mere junior officer in the Air Force, the effect of my letters to Harry L. Hopkins and the other representations I had made was acknowledged by implication in General Marshall's first instructions to General Wedemeyer.

These are, so to speak, my credentials. Having known the situation in wartime China far more intimately than any of the pro-McCarthy witnesses you have yet heard, I think it my duty to say that while I disputed the judgment, I never had the faintest doubt of the loyalty of any of the American officials or others whom McCarthy has attacked. They were serving the United States to the best of their ability, with courage and fidelity. This should be sufficient to protect them from the kind of vulgar attack McCarthy has made, even if their judgment was incorrect.

ALTHOUGH our views clashed sharply, I was particularly well acquainted with Mr. Service. To the best of my knowledge, although I thought then, and think now, that he was gravely in error, he was a most conscientious and decent American public servant. It is difficult, of course, to offer hard evidence to support such contemporary impressions. But I may cite one fact, at least, to show how erroneous it can be to judge situations from the viewpoint of a later time.

Former Vice President Henry A. Wallace has been, in effect, a pliable stooge for the American Communist Party for more than two years. From this, many people have inferred that Wallace was a Communist stooge in wartime. In fact, however, nothing could have been more contrary to the party line in wartime than to urge the dismissal of General Stilwell; yet Wallace recommended the dismissal of Stilwell and his replacement by Wedemeyer in a telegram from China to President Roosevelt in the late spring of 1944. Incidentally, the telegram was sent with the full knowledge of Mr. John Carter Vincent, who entered no protest whatever, although he too has been under attack as a Communist stooge.

In conclusion, there are two points which I feel I must make. First, I do not think I was wrong in opposing the policy of gambling on winning the friendship of the Chinese Communists and inducing them to declare their independence of the Kremlin. I do not think I was wrong, simply because I, and the others who took the same view, could not possibly foresee that when this policy of winning the friendship of the Chinese Communists had been defeated with the dismissal of General Stilwell, there would be a long period after the war during which we had no China policy at all.

None of the men now under attack by Senator McCarthy had any important responsibility, to my knowledge, for this singular hiatus. Speaking for myself, if I could have foreseen that the only alternative to a policy of gambling on the friendship of the Chinese Communists was a kind of vacuum of policy, I should have been on the other side in the struggle in China. The gamble on the Chinese Communists, although unnecessary, in my opinion, was at least a reasonable gamble, such as could be reasonably advocated by entirely loyal Americans.

SECOND, I should like to suggest to your committee that, if the test of loyalty is following the line of the Communist Party, you had much better launch an investigation of Senators McCarthy, Wherry and Taft, than an investigation of Messrs. Lattimore, Service and Vincent. Let the test be a tabulation of the key votes of the three Senators above mentioned on the great postwar measures of foreign policy, and especially of their votes on key amendments by which bills can be nullified.

Unless I am gravely mistaken, such a tabulation will show that these three Senators, and most of the others who have joined them in the present clamor, have voted the straight Communist Party line on every major issue of foreign policy, as laid down in the Daily Worker, ever since the end of the war. If temporary agreement with the party line is to be made the test of loyalty, let these men be called to the bar to explain their records.

In summary, I do not attempt to excuse or palliate the grave American mistakes in China, which I have often before denounced. But I submit that we may as well abandon all hope of having honest and courageous public servants, if mere mistakes of judgment are later to be transformed into evidences of disloyalty to the state. And I submit further that the members of the Senate who are now persecuting these men who made, as I think, mistakes in China, have far more to explain, excuse, and rationalize in their own records. I still believe that the loss of China was unnecessary. But I think it far more important that we should not destroy the decent traditions of American political life. These now seem to be endangered.

Police Quizzed 1000 in Hunt for Store Slayer; 'Break' Came After Month of Checking Clews

the Stanton rd. se. address, recorded for him, they found he had moved and they had not discovered his new address at 2302 Pomeroy rd. se., at the time he was arrested Friday for the stabbing and beating of a pharmacist Thursday night—the arrest which proved to be their "break."

How did police investigate the double slaying? Where did they start? What had they accomplished up to the time of Tyler's arrest?

When the bodies of the guards were found early on the morning of April 7, about 35 policemen were called to the scene immediately. This number grew to 100, as detectives were summoned from their homes.

Floor-to-Floor Search

The store was blocked off immediately, and a floor-by-floor search was conducted by 25 men, in case the murderer was still hiding inside. He was not found.

Homicide squad men, meanwhile, questioned two metal workers, who were repairing a door at the time of the slayings. They could shed no light on the murders. Then the homicide men rounded up six employes, after learning from store officials they had remained four hours after closing time to clean up. They gave police no leads.

By 6 a. m., the bodies of the guards had been removed to the morgue and the entire store had been searched for clues.

A "homicide squad annex" was set up in the store manager's office. There police began questioning of employes as they reported for work.

Further Questioning

Employes were asked preliminary questions — name, address and where they were at the time of the murders. Those who "shook," those who "didn't seem to give a damn" and those who "seemed to have a chip on their shoulder" were sent to headquarters for further questioning.

Four store office workers were put to work right away, compiling names and addresses of former employes. The five-day job gave police a list of about 900 names. Police had also compiled a list of the 400 male employes in the store.

Meantime, a 14-man squad was named to work exclusively on the slayings. The group included men from the homicide, robbery, general assignment and safe squads.

Several Quizzings

Theirs was the job of taking each name and checking through files for police records. Persons with records were questioned several times. Families, friends, and known hangouts were checked.

In addition to employes, and former employes, police questioned window washers, trash collectors and exterminators, who worked under contract. They checked on the "garbage scavengers," who hang around downtown alleys. They checked cab companies and hackers.

Police talked to members of the slain men's families. They checked on the people at the funerals. They questioned persons recently released on parole.

The located men who had been arrested for stabbings. They visited the "gill joints" and other illegal hangouts.

More Than 500 Statements

Daily they questioned men arrested for housebreaking, robbery, or safe jobs. By the end of the month, more than 500 statements were on file and they had talked to at least 500 more persons from whom they did not take statements. And they found themselves against a blank wall.

The piece of rope, used to bind Carpenter before he was stabbed to death, was turned tover to the FBI for examination. It was established that it had not been taken from the store but that the murderer had brought it with him. But they could not track it down.

Stores selling that particular kind of rope were checked one by one. Police discovered, when Tyler finally confessed, that he had taken it from a back yard on Stanton rd.

All downtown sores were checked for shoplifters. Laundries were checked for bloody clothes. Telephone calls and letters from tipsters and cranks had to be followed through. Nothing was too small to be ignored, and all callers were heard through.

The special squad found itself with an enormous file of statements and nothing else.

Then Came The Break

Then Friday morning, the squad got a call. Tyler, who had been arrested for his attack on Jack Katzoff, 34, of 2814 Erie st. se., had told a policeman when he was being fingerprinted, that he had once worked at Lansburgh's.

Questioning began. He admitted nothing. Saturday, they brought him up from the District jail where he had been committed in lieu of $25,000 bond. The questioning went on.

Finally he agreed to a lie detector test. After the first few questions, he suddenly asked for one of the homicide detectives, and signed a full confession.

Thus ended one of Washington's greatest manhunts.

Tyler was charged with two counts of murder Saturday night, arraigned before United States missioner Cyril S. Lawrence, and returned to jail.

Divided Opinion

Police officials are divided as to whether Tyler would have been connected with the slayings if he had not been arrested Friday in the Katzoff case.

Some believe that when police had eventually located him from the list of former employes, he might have broken down and confessed. But say others:

"He was a cool customer and could have been questioned and released without our suspecting him. If it hadn't been for the similarity of the stabbing of Katzow and the guards, we might never have considered him a good suspect and let him go."

Police said no one will get the $1300 reward offered by Lansburghs and the police department for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer.

"Since police themselves first discovered Tyler's connection with the slayings and since they cannot accept rewards, none will be paid," said Lieut. John K. Baker of the homicide squad.

Family, Neighbors Describe Confessed Slayer as 'Quiet'

store about midnight planning to rob the cashier tills in the tea room.

Police say Tyler was arrested some time after his Industrial School term, with several other youngsters, for a series of housebreakings in Fairfax Village and that he was sent away for that.

The youths arrested with him described him as their ringleader, according to police—yet the first word used by several neighbors and acquaintances to describe him yesterday was "quiet."

Since then, the father said, Tyler has worked in a couple of private restaurants in southeast, at the Naval Gun Factory cafeteria, a GSI cafeteria, as a tea-shop porter at Lansburgh's, and as a helper with the Weather-Master Co., where Tyler, sr., has been employed for several years as a storm-window assembler.

However, police say he was discharged from Lansburgh's after it was discovered he and another employe, working late one night, took food from the tea room and ate it in the store's beauty parlor.

Then, the record shows, he was arrested last February 7 on an assault complaint made by a girl friend, who dropped the charge after the parents had talked the matter over. Police said Tyler slapped the girl across the face when she refused to talk to him.

On March 11, while driving a truck for the Weather-Master Co., he was picked up on charges of leaving after colliding with another vehicle, passing a red light, and altering a driver's permit. He was placed on probation.

He quit his job because he believed he had "lost face," said his father.

Neighbors said they were amazed when they heard the youth had been arrested early Friday and charged with stabbing and beating a pharmacist Thursday night.

"He told us flatly he had nothing to do with it," said the father. "When he left with the police, he told me, 'Dad, I'll be back, I have nothing to hide.'"

Neighbors said the pharmacist, Jack I. Katzoff, 34, 2814 Erie st. se., had been kind to the youth and Tyler had told several people how much he liked him.

"If he really did that and the Lansburgh crime, something must have gone wrong with his mind," one neighbor said.

Tyler lives with his parents and a brother, Edgar Timothy, 16, who attends Randall Junior High School, at First and I st. sw., the same school that William left four years ago.

"There was no reason for Junior to do anything like this," his father said.

"We're not rich," added the youth's mother, Mrs. Madie Tyler, 48, "but he's always had whatever he needed."

Both parents work, the father in the daytime and the mother at night, as a charwoman at the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Their combined income is about $75 a week. The son, when employed, contributed about $5 of his $30 weekly earnings toward home expenses, the parents said.

"He's always been a helpful boy; he does things like cleaning the house and anything I ask him to do," said Mrs. Tyler, who said she could not bear to have police describe her boy as "vicious" and "savage."

The Tyler family moved to its present white stucco three-bedroom home in the Stanton Park section last January. For eight years they had lived in a modern apartment at 1842 Stanton ter., but they had to leave because their combined income went over the limit allowed for residents of the Stanton Terrace development.

The family, who became Roman Catholics some time ago, sent Tyler to St. Vincent de Paul parochial school, then to Garfield and Turner Schools, before he attended Randall Junior High. Their church attendance has been irregular, and they are now listed at the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, located on the hill behind their home, as "not Catholics."

The powerful, 190-pound youth took some interest in sports at school, and has been playing baseball and softball with neighborhood teams in the Stanton ter. section, his father said.

He did not seem to have friends who might be a bad influence, has never had an automobile, never spent much money on clothes and has not run around much with girls, according to his family.

Coan's 2d Grand Slam Homer in 5 Days Routs Tribe, 10-5; Hogan Ties World's 72-Hole Mark With 259, 21 Under Par

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 7.—That eminent horseman, Mr. Robert Hope of stage, screen, radio, television and Kentucky Derby fame, achieved that last distinction at a late hour Saturday night.

Where there's life there's hope, and therefore he was largely present at the lively post-Derby party in Bill Corum's Churchill Downs penthouse, and there it was that Rapid Robert achieved lasting Derby fame. It will last at least until another Derby.

POVICH

In addition to the flunkies who were sweeping the place after the Derby crowd had started homeward, a rumor was also sweeping the place. It was being reported, probably by dismayed Californians, that their horse, Your Host, was bleeding in the stretch when he chucked the lead and finished ninth.

Said Hope: "Gentlemen, I know not whether Your Host was bleeding in the stretch, but I can state with perfect confidence, that during that stretch run, the whole State of California was bleeding."

ACTUALLY, the only thing that happened to Your Host was that he was tuckered, didn't like the distance, got a funny sort of a ride from the veteran Johnny Longden, tried hard, proved (1) he wasn't horse enough, and proved (2) some of the worst things the anti-California faction were saying about him.

Your Host and his California admirers could not complain about conditions at the start. He drew the favored No. 1 post position, broke second, and drew clear by two lengths before the party of 14 reached the clubhouse turn. If there was any trouble in the race, it was behind him.

It was Black George, that spendthrift of speed, which put Your Host under killing pressure in the backstretch, with Longden apparently committed to keeping his mount in front and trying to steal the biggest kind of lead on the better-respected things to his rear. It didn't work. There was speed to burn behind him, and Mr. Trouble began burning it, and headed the California comet going into the far turn.

YOU COULD have counted Your Host out at that point, because horses seldom—if ever—lost the lead and came again in the Derby. But Your Host had one more thrill for his California backers. Hitting the final turn, and turning for home, he answered Longden's urging, and stuck his nose in front of Mr. Trouble again.

But that was his last gasp. Longden had defied all riding orthodoxy by making two distinct moves with his horse, at the start and turning into the stretch, and he couldn't get away with it. He found a tired horse on his hands. Better make that in his hands. Your Host wanted no more of the race. He finished as if drunk, swaying all over the track. He backslid from first to ninth, and that's where he finished.

But if Your Host didn't win the race, he was a factor in it, because in his staggers during the stretch, he plainly impeded the on-rushing Hill Prince. The Virginia colt, taking dead aim at the new leader, Middleground, first tried to go outside Your Host, was forced to take up under Arcaro, and take the inside avenue, away from the drifting Californian. All the while, Middleground was making a bee-line for the wire on a straight course, and got there first, by a length and a quarter.

BUT YOUR HOST and the pace he set contributed to the second fastest Derby in history, and thus the more glory to Middleground, the Texas colt who won it when the faint-hearted favorite couldn't manage that last long quarter mile. And the more honor, perhaps, to the gallant Virginian, Hill Prince, who took the worst of the running and finished second.

In a couple of ways, it was a sweet victory for Middleground's owner, Bob Kleberg, jr., of the fabulous King Ranch of Texas, who saw his Bold Venture colt come through as his daddy had done. He never weakened on Middleground's ability to take it all, and he had his own definite and confident ideas about the opposition he would meet.

"I picked the race one-two," said Kleberg exultantly. "The horse to beat, we reckoned, was the horse we did beat, Hill Prince. Maxie Hirsch and I were sort of amused when they all said before the race that Your Host was the horse to lick. When did anything by Alibhai ever like a distance of ground?"

Ben Finishes With 66 to Win Open by 10 Strkoes

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—Ben Hogan tied the world's record for 72 holes of golf on a par 70 course today with 21-under-par 193, 66—259, that won the Greenbrier Open golf tournament by 10 strokes.

It was Bantam Ben's first PGA tournament victory since his return to the tournament wars after a near-fatal automobile accident in February, 1948.

Hogan has been trying to win one since January. On his first attempt, he tied Sam Snead at the Los Angeles Open with 280, but later lost the playoff. He led the field for a while in the Augusta Masters, but faded in the final rounds.

The Money Winners:

Ben Hogan	193, 66—259—	$1250
Sam Snead	203, 66—269—	1050
Norman von Nida	205, 65—270—	900
Skip Alexander	200, 71—271—	775
Johnny Palmer	206, 66—272—	550
Clayton Heafner	203, 70—273—	450
Fred Hawkins	206, 68—274—	400
Ed Furgol	205, 70—275—	325
David Douglas	206, 69—275—	325
Glenn Teal	208, 68—276—	275
Paul O'Leary	210, 68—278—	193
Jim Ferrier	211, 67—278—	193
Gene Sarazen	210, 68—278—	193
Bob Toski	209, 69—278—	193
Chck Harbert	206, 73—279—	112
Henry Ransom	209, 70—279—	112
Jerry Barber	211, 69—280
Jim Turnesa	212, 68—280
Pete Cooper	212, 69—281
Dick Mayer	211, 71—282
Al Smith	214, 68—282
George Fazio	216, 66—282

The record for 72 holes of golf on a par-70 course was set by Byron Nelson in the Seattle Open in 1945. Hogan already holds the record score of 261, 27 strokes under par, for play on a par-72 layout. He set that standard at the Portland, Ore., Country Club in 1945.

Hogan had successive rounds of 64, 64, 65 and 66 over the 6368-yard old White course to compile his total.

Host pro Sam Snead was second in the four-day Greenbrier Open, 10 strokes behind Hogan with 203, 66—269. Norman Von Nida of Sydney, Australia, was third at 205, 65—270, and Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn., fourth with 200, 71—271.

Hogan's approaches were not as sharp as on his first three rounds. But he started out under full throttle by getting birdies on the first two holes. He canned a 20-foot putt on the first green as a gallery that grew to some 2,000 at the finish looked on.

After making the turn just one under par, Hogan picked up three birdies on the in nine.

Fazio Has 66

Ben went one over par for his second and last time of the tournament on the 380-yard par 4 fourth after getting his drive into the rough.

Snead, Palmer and George Fazio of Washington, D. C., joined Hogan with 66s today, and Jim Ferrier of San Francisco had a 67. There were five 68's and six 69's.

Nats Get 17 Safeties, Score 6 Runs In Seventh

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Gil Coan struck a mighty blow for freedom yesterday, a grand slam home run which emancipated the Nats from their three-game losing streak.

Coan's clout was the plu-perfect piece de resistance to a seventh-inning comeback which saw the Nats dig out from a 5-4 deficit with a six-run sortie that delivered them a 10-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Clubbed at the expense of Bob Lemon, a 22-game winner last year, Coan parked his second grand-slammer in five days into the unoccupied seats of the new left-field stands, some 390 feet from home plate.

23,138 Watch Game

The fleet-footed outfielder cleaned the bases in a similar fashion only Thursday night to beat the Browns, 4-3. He hit that one over the right-field wall, however, a more conventional spot for the left-handed hitter that he is.

While Coan's feat was the big blow of the day for the Nats and 23,138 Griffith Stadium bystanders, it was by no means the only attraction for the season's biggest turnout since opening day.

If it was homers they were looking for, the mob saw four of 'em, including Coan's. Al Rosen, Cleveland's rookie thirdsacker, unloaded two into Griffith's green pastures, and Catcher Jim Hegan also parked one in the bleacher annex.

And if they craved pitching, they got that, too. Of the half dozen performers, the Nats' Mickey Harris was the stickout by a country mile. The crafty lefthander took over from Cuban Connie Marrero, who was making his first major league start, and blanked the Indians on one hit for the last five innings to score his first success of the season.

And if mass production of base hits was their dish, that was there for 'em also, furnished by the Nats who massaged Cleveland pitching for 17 solid socks, their biggest offensive display of the year.

And as a final fillip, one not in the script, the crowd also saw an eager-beaver usher, stationed near the left-field box seat, rush out and field Eddie Yost's double and deprive the Nats of a run they needed at the time.

Assigned to retrieve foul balls, the Usher Larry Nussbaum, made a bare-handed pickup of Yost's hit down the left-field line. This timely—for Cleveland—stop came in the fourth inning with Al Evans on first base. Evans had rounded third and would have scored easily but for the sudden presence of Cleveland's assistant leftfielder. The umpires ruled it a ground rule

Suggs Wins With 84–160

Chicago, May 7 (AP).—Louise Suggs of Atlanta, shot an 84 today to win the Skycrest section of the cross country weathervane open golf meet with a 36-hole tally of 160.

Low for today's round was 82. Four players tagged it. Bebe Zaharias Skycrest pro, authored a pair of 41s for a double round 167 and second place.

Mrs. Betty Bush, Hammond, Ind., topped the amateurs with 82 for 168. Betty Jameson, former national champion from San Antonio, Tex., posted 82 for 170, and Patty Berg did the same for 172.

The transcontinental weathervane competition of 144 holes switches to the Ridgewood Country Club in Cleveland, Ohio, for two rounds next weekend.

Griffs Trade Vollmer to Bosox

Combs, OBrien Come Here in Straight Swap

The Nats made a two-for-one deal with the Boston Red Sox yesterday, getting infielder Merrill Combs and Outfielder Tommy O'Brien for Outfielder Clyde Vollmer.

There was no cash involved, said Clark Griffith, who completed the deal over the weekend with his son-in-law, Joe Cronin, general manager of the Bosox.

Combs, who played with Nats Sam Dente and Sam Mele on Boston's pennant-winning farm team at Scranton in 1946, and O'Brien, who had a brief tryout with Pittsburgh Pirates, will report this morning.

The 30-year-old Combs played in only 14 games for Boston last year when Thirdbaseman Johnny Pesky injured his hand late in the season. O'Brien was in 49 games and batted only .224.

Combs bats left-handed, is 6 feet tall, weighs 160 pounds and is a native of Los Angeles.

O'Brien, 29, bats and throws right-handed and will replace Vollmer in Manager Bucky Harris' two-platoon outfield system, playing when the Nats face left-handed pitching.

A former Tennessee football star, O'Brien was purchased by the Pirates from Atlanta of the Southern Association for $40,000 several years ago. He failed to make it with the Bucs and was acquired by the Red Sox who sent him to their Birmingham farm team and brought him up last year.

Byrne Hurls, Bats Yanks To 6-3 Victory

New York, May 7 (AP).—Tommy Byrne pitched and batted the New York Yankees to a 6-3 triumph over the Detroit Tigers today. The tall left-hander singled in two runs in the eighth inning to break a 3-3 tie and rounded the bases on a trio of throwing errors.

He spaced nine hits for his first victory of the season.

The Tigers jumped on Byrne for single runs in the first two innings and enjoyed a 3-1 lead at the end of five before a crowd of 54,027 fans. Yogi Berra homered in the fourth for the Yankee run.

The Yanks tied the count against starter Ted Gray with two runs in the sixth. Byrne knocked in one with a long fly. Gray departed in this inning in favor of Paul Calvert who stopped the rally by getting Phil Rizzuto to hit into a double play.

Gus Zernial Hurt

Athletics Win, 4-2, After Losing To White Sox in Opener, 7-2

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP).—Home runs by Pete Suder and Mike Guerra provided the Philadelphia Athletics with a 4-2 second-game victory over the Chicago White Sox today for an even split as Chicago had landed Lou Brissie his fourth straight pitching setback while gaining a 7-2 first-game triumph.

Two Chicago White Sox players were injured during the first game. They were Outfielders Gus Zernial and Jim Busby.

Zernial had to be helped off the field when he suffered a bad bruise below his left knee cap on a play at second base in the seventh inning.

Williams Clouts 7th Homer

Bosox Win 2, Near Lead

Boston, May 7 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox moved within 42 percentage points of the American League-leading Detroit Tigers today as they twice whipped the St. Louis Browns, 8-6 and 6-2, in a doubleheader which finished nearly six hours after it started.

The Sox outstruggled the lowly Browns in the three-hour-long opener in which 20 walks were issued by pitchers of both sides. Al Papai was victorious over his former mates as he traveled the route in the second game before 34,523 paid fans.

Ted Williams hit his seventh homer of the year in the third inning of the opener with no one on base and Don Lenhardt banged his second of the year for the Browns in the sixth.

Three Brownie errors aided the Sox to three seventh-inig runs as they came from a 6-5 deficit to win the opener.

Last season Williams rapped his seventh homer in the 19th game of hte campaign on May 11.

A high, gusty wind blew throughout the long afternoon and ground keepers were called on by General Manager Joe Cronin to rewet the infield at th start of the first game's third inning.

The Browns scored single runs in the first and second innings of the second game and led 2-0 until the fourth when the Sox tallied twice to even the score.

Williams singled home the third run, enough to win, in the fifth.

Dom Dimaggio got seven hits in 10 times at bat, boosting his average 50 points to .389.

Reds Lose 2 To Phils, Run Loses to Six

Cincinnati, May 7 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies tossed away a four-run lead over the Cincinnati Reds today but came back in the eighth on Del Ennis' homer and scored another run in the ninth to win both ends of a double bill, 6-0, 6-4, before a crowd of 13,313.

For the Reds it was their fifth and sixth straight defeats.

Eddie Waitkus and Dick Sisler smacked home runs for Philadelphia in the first game to ice Kenny Heintzelman's three-hit shutout.

He Wallops Home Run And 3 for 3

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP).—Jackie Robinson made it a one-man show today as the Brooklyn Dodgers came from behind to tab a 3-2 win over Pittsburgh Pirates. The Bums' sparkling second baseman drove in all three Brooklyn tallies with a home run, a double and a single in three tries.

A near capacity crowd of 33,734 paying customers saw Robinson lace his game-winning four-bagger into the left field bullpen in the sixth with nobody aboard. It was Jackie's second homer of the year.

Double Sews Up Game

Robinson sewed the game up in the third when his double to left scored Pee Wee Reese and George Shuba.

A wild Jack Banta donated the Pirates two runs in the first game. With Ralph Kiner on third base, Banta uncorked a wild toss and Kiner scored. Then after retiring Stan Rojek, Banta tossed another wild one and Nanny Fernandez crossed the plate.

Rex Barney relieved Banta in the fourth. He pitched one-hit ball until relieved by Carl Erskine in the ninth.

O. K. After Derby Grind

Middleground Points For Preakness Next

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—Cagey, old Max Hirsch, with a brand new Kentucky Derby champion, failed to allow a champagne-flavored victory celebration last night interfere with business as usual this morning.

Walter Haight

A taxi load of sportscribes arrived in front of Middleground's barn to find they were just so many "Hill Princes," being second to Max by some 10 minutes.

Hirsch was briefing Will Daniels, grizzled old stable foreman wearing a week's growth of whiskers, on details of shipping Middleground to Belmont Park tomorrow where the colt will get in his training licks before shooting at another leg of the triple crown in the Preakness a week from Saturday.

Max ordered hot steamers, plus medicated mud pack, for Middleground after feeling first the feet and then the ankles of the new champ.

"He came out of the race OK," said the canny conditioner, "but the track was kinda hard and we must take precautions."

Hirsch reached over the half door of the stall and gave Middleground a fatherly pat and the colt responded by nuzzling the trainer's arm.

Billy Boland, the 18-year-old apprentice jockey, came around the corner of the barn. He smiled at the gathering of trainers, grooms and sightseers. Somebody said, "Boy, you are a champ, too."

"I don't believe you will succeed, but stop trying to make this kid big-headed," said Max. "He's got a lot more work to do."

A little girl stepped up, patted Homely, the black dog who is Middleground's mascot (also was Assault's companion when he won.) She had several lumps of sugar and fed them to Middleground with her palm flattened.

"You certainly know how to feed a horse," observed Hirsch.

"I have a pony of my own," she smiled.

Jake Lowenstein, Max's old friend and the man who has helped prep Hirsch's Derby winners, arrived. "Looks like I sharpened up another one," he laughed.

Hirsch was brought into a conversation about the Preakness. He believes Middleground will have Hill Prince, Mr. Trouble and Ferd to beat in the order named. The last-named was made a $1500 supplementary for the Pimlico Classic but was not a Derby entry.

Robert Kleberg, owner of Middleground and the vast King Ranch which covers three quarters of a million Texas acres, had left with his party for his Kentucky farm near Lexington.

Mention of the owner brought a smile to Max's face and he said, "Come to think of it, I lost a bet when Middleground won. I thought the track was going to be muddy and I wagered Mr. Kleberg a 10-gallon hat that On The Mark would finish ahead of Middleground."

THE DERBY CLEAN UP—Scribes are still trying to figure out why Eddie Arcaro denied having trouble with Hill Prince. Everybody and their cousins, including the chart crews, thought they saw the Virginia-bred hampered in the running . . . Perhaps Eddie was confused. He was late getting here yesterday when storms delayed his plane. He was late getting in the jockey's room, late arriving at the paddock, late getting in the saddle and, of course, a length and a quarter late with Hill Prince at the finish . . . A writer who had gone broke either at the mutuel window or the bar, perhaps both, tried to sell his watch to bet on Mr. Trouble. Unable to get a buyer, he proffered the timepiece to the man running the press-box bets and said, "Put the watch on Mr. Trouble and if he wins bring me back an eight-day clock. Dave Woods and Jack Needles of Pimlico were around beating the drums for the Preakness. Eddie O'Hara general manager of Bowie, was here trying to beat the horses with deuce bets . . . Boland, Middleground's rider, loses his apprentice allowance May 13, a year after riding his first winner. Makes no difference, however, regarding the Preakness and Belmont which, like the Derby, do not have "bug" weight concessions . . . Jack Robertson, who rode Sunglow, believes the colt is improving and will be heard from in a big way before snowfall. Writer Bob Considine, whiling away the time before the Derby, came up to type a Notre Dame football story in the race track pressbox. One of his colleagues noted the South Bend, Ind., dateline and yelled, "A sacrilege if I ever heard of one." Bob snapped, "This piece is about the Four Horsemen." . . . Walter Fugate, owner-trainer of Hallieboy, wasn't too downhearted about his colt's showing. "We beat four horses," he grinned, "and the horse immediately in front of us was Your Host." Joe Engle, ball club president who bred and later sold Hallieboy, walked up to Fugate an electrician among other things, and said, "Now that we're through with all this Derby bunk, I want to remind you to check the fuses on my front porch lights they haven't been working right lately."

Pollet Halts Braves Wtth Four-Hitter

St. Louis, May 7 (AP).—Howard Pollett stopped the rampaging Boston Braves cold today on just four hits while the St. Louis Cardinals let loose with a barrage of their own for a 15-to-0 triumph.

The Braves scored 55 times in their previous four games before facing Pollet.

Howard struck out five Braves and walked one. Del Crandall and pinchbatter Roy Hartsfield were the only Braves to reach second base.

Prince Georges, Bethesda Victors in State Team Matches

At Woodmont

Wherein an Ace Counts for a Deuce

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Sam Schwartz made a hole-in-one at Woodmont yesterday but it counted as a two.

Schwartz teed off on the 165-yard, par 3, fifth hole.

Plunk! The ball landed squarely in the middle of a creek.

Since the shot was unplayable, Schwartz teed off again, this time for a hole-in-one. He was playing with Dave Wortman, Alvin Newmeyer and Melvin Kraft.

ARGYLE: R. M. Stearn and Dick Mothershead tied for first place in the blind bogey. Stearn had 86—11—75, and Mothershead had 77—2—75. L. S. Johnston with 83—7—76 and J. Hall with 91—15—76 tied for third.

WASHINGTON: W. N. Flint took first low net in 18-hole medal play with 98—36—62, 8 under par. H. D. Kerfoot was second with 83—19—64. C. W. Featherstone was third with 72—7—65, and Ed Goetz was fourth with 82—16—66. Jim Gardner took the low gross with a par 70.

BELLE HAVEN: Comdr. Frank Heyer, W. E. Dickinson, A. C. Taylor and W. H. Genest won the Breakfast Foursome with a best ball 61, 9 below par.

N. P. Hays won the sweepstakes tournament with 82—14—68. H. H. Hannah was second, 93—23—70. Frank Wasley was third, 74—5—69, and Col. Ben Schreiver took low gross with 74.

CONGRESSIONAL: G. L. Cornell won the blind bogey with 74—4—70. B. J. McLarney, with 90—16—74, and A.W. Tilley with 101—27—74 tied for second. J. E. McCarron and R. E. Wilson tied for fourth with identical scores: 87—9—78.

LANGSTON: The Royal Golf Club beat the Postoffice Golfers 20—8 yesterday.

In the Leonard Kenerly Memorial Handicap, played in honor of the first president of the United Golfers Association, George Grimstead and Tom Alston tied for first. Grimstead had 86—15—71 and Alston had 77—6—71. R. Thomas was third with 80—6—74. William Mays and Wilfred Garner ted for low gross with 75 each.

ARMY-NAVY: Yesterday's blind bogey ended in a tie for first between G. H. Kreiger, 76—6—70, and B. H. White, 75—5—70. There was a three-way tie for third between Fred W. Hallagan, R. A. Tunnell and W. R. Robinson with net 79s.

MANOR: C. E. McGowan with 45—11—34, J. A. Dodge with 46—12—34, and M. T. Sawtelle with 44—10—34, tied for first in yesterday's nine selective hole tourney.

D. C. Area Drivers Win 7 of 9 Power Boat Races on Potomac

By Happy Walker

Washington area speedboat drivers won in all but two of the nine events in the first of the spring power boat race series on the Potomac yesterday.

Sponsored by the Capital Power Boat Association, 51 entrants from Washington and surrounding areas, answered the starting flag of Bill Rogers, referee.

Star of the show was a 25-year-old automobile salesman, William Carbo, who took the measure of 14 starters in the popular BU stock utility class. Incidentally, this is Carbo's first year in racing.

Out-of-towners from Solomons, Md., dominated the EU stock lead positions. Winners were My Baby, J. P. Woodburn, jr., 700 points.; Jumping Bean, John W. Hall, commodore, Solomon Outboard Club, 700 points, and Damfino, Tom Bauer, 450 points. By Baby placed first by having best elapsed time.

Amato Taneal, a newcomer to inboards, saved the 48 Hydro class featured event, by finishing first, after a ragged start, which saw four of the entries conking out. After emergency repairs all starters finished.

JU CLASS (1 heat)—Snooks, Jackie Lanier, Washington, 400 points; Patsy Hoffmann, Alexandria, did not start.

AU CLASS (2 heats)—Flash, Phil Hoffmann III, Alexandria, 800 points; A-93, Tom Bennington, Washington, 600; Dinga Boy, Francis Pasquini, Washington, 450.

BU CLASS (2 heats)—Mickey-Jo, William Carbo, Washington, 800; Miss Annie Laurie II, Jackie Lanier, Washington, 600; Rambler, Howard Watkins, Lexington Park, Md., 392.

CU CLASS (2 heats)—Sunday Punch III, Jack Marr, Falls Church, 600 points; E-33, I. E. Hale, Washington, 471; Kapu, Vernon W. Garner, Dowell, Md., 450.

EU CLESS (2 heats)—My Baby, J. P. Woodburn, jr., Solomons, Md., 700 points; Jumping Bean, John W. Hall, jr., Solomons, Md., 700; Damfino, Tom Bauer, Solomons, Md., 450. (My Baby wins first on faster elapsed time.)

Stepalong Wins Laurel Hunter Title

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

The Laurel Pony and Junior Horse Show got off to a good start yesterday at J. L. Aitcheson's farm, Burtonsville, Md., with Jo Shipley's Stepalong earning the junior hunter title over Margaret Reisinger's Wye.

The pony division divided into the three-size groupings resulted in Bobby Gardner's Danny Boy, Laura Lee Shreve's Chico, and Willowbrook Stable's Duchess taking the championship honors in their respective divisions.

Herbert Lytle, with his Dark Watch, and Edna Griswold on her mannerly Missy had nice rounds and earned well-deserved minor awards after their dauntless efforts in the Washington Bridle Trails Association's show at Equitation Field in the morning.

Maderia School Girl Rides Show Winner

Sandra Davies, a Madeira School student took the grand championship honors at the McLean Junior Horse Show with her 8-year-old Miss Escape, piling up a total of 21 points.

Reserve resulted in a tie between E. W. Revercomb's Chincoteague Gal, ridden by Toni Brewer, and her stablemate Baby, ridden by Micky Eichhorn, both ponies scored 14½ points, their two riders deciding to flip a coin for the ribbon with Baby victorious.

Bruce, Dark Watch, Missy Tie in Park

The battle for points at the first member show of The Washington Bridle Trails Association was a nip-and-tuck affair as Francis Hill's Bruce, Edna Griwold's Missy, and H. G. Lytle's Dark Watch each scored 9 points in the privately-owned division yesterday at Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park.

In the public riding academy events, Pegasus Riding School's April Dawn chealked up an 8-point tally for the spring series lead and Potomac Riding School's Fred was next in line with 6 points.

Kings Point Takes Dinghy Cup; GW 2d

Annapolis, Md., May 7 (AP).—Led by John (Red) Smith, who won six of eight races, Kings Point outsailed seven other entries to capture the Collegiate Middle Atlantic Dinghy Championships.

The Merchant Mariners piled up 122 points in the two-day competition to successfully defend the America Cup.

George Washington University finished second with 117 points, followed by Princeton, 109; Navy, 105; Army, 77; Webb Institute, 66; Stevens Institute, 64, and Cooper Union, 54.

Smith accounted for 71 points of his team's total and George Collins registered 60 for George Washington.

Navy, which had dominated the section's dinghy competition for three years before Kings Point took over last year, faltered after ending yesterday's sailing in a first-place tie with the Merchant Marine Academy.

Gussie Upset By Scofield

Wiesbaden, May 7 (AP).—Barbara Scofield of San Francisco upset Gertrude Gussie Moran of Monica, Calif., today to win the Women's singles in Wiesbaden's International Tennis Tournament, 2—6, 12—10, 8—6.

Jack Harper of Australia won the men's singles with a 6—4, 7—5, 6—1 triumph over Ernest Buchholz of Germany.

Ballston Wins Loop Opener, 6-4

The Ballston Indians topped Randall Motors, 6-4, yesterday in the opener of the newly formed Old Dominion Baseball League.

In other games Virginia White Sox beat the Manassas Red Sox, 5-4; Vienna Fire Department outslugged Forestville A. C., 17-1, and Falls Church vanquished McLean A. C., 23-6.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Administration to Urge Congressional Caution in Changing Leave System

The Administration will caution Congress to make a "careful and detailed" study of the Government leave system before making any changes in it.

Indirectly, its report will oppose the bills by Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) to reduce annual and sick leave for 1,300,000 classified and per diem workers. However, it won't close the door to any changes Congress may care to make in the leave system after a thorough study of the issue.

The report will summarize the Government's leave policies for the past 75 years, pointing out that for many years the classified and per diem employes were entitled to 30 days each of annual and sick leave, and that the present system of 26 days annual and up to 15 days sick leave has been the policy for the past 16 years.

The Administration will contend that it would be unfair to the employes to reduce leave abruptly without making a careful study of all of the problems involved; furthermore, that it's in no position to recommend any changes in the leave laws until such a survey is made.

The Civil Service Commission is preparing the report for the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee. The important document, which is likely to prevent any drastic leave changes this year by Congress, will be made public in a few days.

It's probable that the Senate committee will request a joint study to be made by the Budget Bureau and the Civil Service Commission in cooperation with its own professional staff.

A second report on the Douglas bills is being prepared by another Federal agency. It will bring out that millions of dollars in salaries could be saved and Federal employment reduced if annual and sick leave were reduced. The report, however, won't indorse the Douglas leave-cutting bills.

In addition, Civil Service, in a rather noncommittal report, will say it has no objection to the bill by Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) to give postal employes 26 days' annual and 15 days of sick leave annually. But the Comptroller General will oppose the bill on the ground that it has no limit on leave accumulation by postal workers. The Civil Service report also is critical of the no-limit-on-accumulation feature. Postal employes get only 15 days annual and 10 days' sick leave.

As revealed here yesterday, the White House soon will direct agency heads to cut down on the vast accumulation of annual leave of classified and per diem workers.

Under the order, now being drafted, each regular employe would be required to take an annual vacation of about three weeks, or 15 days, and he would have 11 days to use for shopping and other personal chores. Each employe would be forced to take all leave in excess of 60 days within a reasonable time, and no employes would be allowed to carry over more than 60 days at the end of the year.

The average regular employe would take annual leave in the year he earned it under the White House proposal. Only in rare cases would employes be allowed to carry over large blocks of leave earned during the year.

Once the order becomes official, tens of thousands of Federal workers must revamp their vacation plans. They had better start to think about them now.

Meantime, the House is about ready to vote on a provision to compel all Federal employes to take annual leave as they earn it this year or lose it. The leave restriction is carried as a rider to the general appropriation bill. The Administration plan to "police" leave will take the pressure off enactment of the leave rider.

On the Senate side, Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) has two bills to reduce annual and sick leave for classified and per diem employes. One would give all emyployes 20 days annual and 12 days sick leave. An alternative bill would fix leave on a sliding scale, from 10 to 20 days annually, based on years of service.

The Senate committee has been waiting for the reports from the Administration on the two bills before any action is taken on them.

Five Stations In Area Form Air Network

First Program Limited To 1 Hour; Expanded Operations Planned

Five Greater Washington radio stations have pooled their facilities to form the Metropolitan Network, Station WPIK, Alexandria, announced yesterday.

The participating stations are: WPIK, WARL, Arlington; WFAX, Falls Church; WBCC, Bethesda; WGAY, Silver Spring.

The new network will program exclusively for the Washington area. All five stations will carry the network programs.

The first network program will be transmitted simultaneously over the stations today at 7 p. m. The network, temporarily, will operate only from 7 to 8 p.m. daily. But expanded operations are planned.

When the network is not operating each of the five stations will carry its individual regular program. The stations involved are daytime stations operating normally from sunrise to sunset.

Man Bites Dog, Police Move In, Man Moves Out

This story is news in the classical tradition.

It concerns a man who bit a dog.

The man is Sitwell Long, 23, a laborer, of 2227 Georgia ave. nw.

The dog is a black mongrel.

Police, answering a trouble call, said they found Long in the kitchen of his home biting into the haunches of the howling animal.

Long was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation, after he told police it was his dog, and he could bite it if he wished.

Recreation Post

Loss of Job Talk Heard By Schwab

James E. Schwab, vice chairman of the District Recreation Board, yesterday said he had heard indirectly that he may be replaced on the board when his appointment runs out May 29.

Sources close to the District recreation picture said the Interior Department was against reappointment of Schwab because of his attitude towards segregation.

Schwab himself said he thought the Department was "unhappy" about his testimony last year before a House committee investigating the District golf courses. At the time, Schwab accused the Department of poor supervision.

A member of the board since 1942 who helped get the District recreation act through Congress, Schwab said he hadn't discussed his reappointment with the District Commissioners but had heard that a replacement had been suggested.

Commissioner John Russell Young was not at home yesterday but he was quoted as saying he couldn't comment on the matter.

Asked yesterday whether the Interior Department had any objection to Schwab's reappointment, Undersecretary Girard Davidson also replied that he could not comment.

Because the job is thankless as well as for family reasons, Schwab said he didn't care much about being reappointed.

The Interior Department has insisted on a policy of nonsegregation in recreation facilities.

In the recent swimming pool issue, Schwab has lined up with the majority of the Recreation Board in refusing to accept control of the swimming pools on a nonsegregated basis. Several Negro groups have attacked Chairman H. S. Wender because of his stand on the swimming pools. Wender's appointment has two more years to run.

Episcopal Diocese Convenes

Washington Body Opens 55th Annual Session; Cathedral Rededicated Here

The fifty-fifth annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington opened yesterday with a service of rededication at the Washington Cathedral.

Business sessions of the convention will be at St. John's Church, Bethesda, beginning with a service of Holy Communion at 8 a. m. today followed by breakfast.

The service yesterday opened with a procession of more than 350 clergymen, lay delegates, and choirs from 10 churches starting at the Bethlehem Chapel, through the cathedral grounds, and back into the cathedral.

In his sermon, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, said that the story of the love of God lies "at the foundation and at the center of our life together in the church."

"Here is a love that is hard as nails, that can flame in wrath against injustice and falsehood and ritual triviality and religious pretensions," he went on.

"The best the church can offer our fear-ridden, hate-ridden world is that it should be in every human neighborhood a comradeship of lives where the love of God and the love of man are found.

"If it is not that, whatever else it may be as a going human concern . . . it is salt that has lost its savor, and fit only to be cast out and trodden underfoot of men," the bishop said.

Heads of the diocesan departments of missions, Christian education, finance, social relations and promotion led a special litany of the church's work.

Today's sessions will include election of diocesan officers, reports of committees, an address by the bishop, and talks by Canon Richard Williams of the Diocesan Department of Social Relations and Col. Joseph S. Harbison, USA.

McGrath to Get National Award Of B'nai B'rith

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath has been named 1949 winner of the "America's Democratic Legacy Award," sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, it was announced yesterday.

McGrath

The award, won last year by President Truman, will be presented to McGrath in Chicago during the Anti-Defamation League's annual meeting, May 12 to 15.

McGrath was selected, the organization's national commission announced, "in tribute to his vigorous defense of civil rights, both as a Senator from Rhode Island—during which time he was Congress' leading spokesman for civil rights legislation—and as Attorney General."

Choir Festival Presented by Area Groups

Sylvan Theater Scene Of 200-Voice Program Under Dr. Williamson

More than 200 choristers from about 35 Greater Washington churches yesterday joined in a choral festival at the Sylvan Theater on the grounds of the Washington Monument.

The festival was sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches as part of its celebration of the city's sesquicentennial.

Director of the group was Dr. John Finley Williamson, president of Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N. J.

Throughout last week he conducted a school of music here for choral directors and choir members.

The entire program of the festival yesterday consisted of hymns and Scriptural readings, led by the Rev. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Singers were garbed in the choir robes of the different churches they represented, some in black, some in maroon, others in white.

Climax of the service was the singing by the choral group of the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's Messiah.

D. C. Leads U. S. in Ratio Of Lawyers

The District has the greatest "lawyer concentration" in the Nation, with one attorney for every 183 persons, the American Bar Association's Journal has just reported.

New York State is a poor second with one lawyer for every 497 inhabitants. At the bottom of the list of States is South Carolina, with one for every 1723 residents.

The article, a preliminary report on a survey of the legal profession, gives Washington 4702, or 2.7 percent of the Nation's 171,110 lawyers. Of all lawyers, 21,273 are in some sort of Federal, State or local government service.

A special school census of youngsters up to 20 years old will begin this week in Arlington and Fairfax counties.

The count of students, required every five years under Virginia law, must be completed in communities throughout the State before next September.

Alexandria enumerators began a similar count of city children in April. Falls Church will conduct its state census in June.

Takomans Vote Tuesday On Bond Issue

Balloting to Decide Question of Financing Municipal Center

Takoma Park, Md., residents will decide Tuesday at a special election whether they want the city to borrow up to $200,000 in bonds to construct a municipal center.

A total of 4500 eligible voters may cast their ballots on the special election in the Takoma Park firehouse, Carroll and Denwood aves., from 7 a. m. until 7 p. m. Montgomery County voting machines will be used.

Under the ordinance calling for a referendum, the bonds will be issued for 10 years at not more than 2 percent interest. Mayor Ross H. Bevile and the City Council have publicly assured the property owners that the present tax rate of $1.13 per $100 assessed valuation will not be increased if the bond issue is approved.

Councilman Lawrence Oosterhous, chairman of the council's city improvement committee which is sponsoring the proposed project, said yesterday that public hearings on details such as selection of the site, size of the building and the services it will include, will be held if the citizens vote favorably on the referendum.

Policeman Arrested in Md. Slaying Of Boy, 14

Walters Charged With Manslaughter; Released on Bond; Hearing Set June 2

Anne Arundel County Policeman William Walters was charged formally with manslaughter yesterday in the shooting of a 14-year-old fugitive from the Industrial Home School Friday night.

The warrant was issued by Justice of the Peace J. R. Creecy of Suitland, Md., shortly after 1 a. m. yesterday. The warrant was obtained by Detective Vincent S. Free upon direction of State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie of Prince Georges County.

The policeman was released on bond of $1000 pending a preliminary hearing in Prince Georges County Police Court at Upper Marlboro, Md., June 2.

Decision to charge Walters was made after State's Attorney Bowie and Chief of Police Ralph W. Brown had conducted an inquiry lasting all day Saturday and until nearly 1 a.m. yesterday.

Escaped March 2

The dead boy, George William Mooney jr., of 20 14th st. ne., had escaped from the Industrial Home School, 2453 Wisconsin ave. nw., March 2. He was found in a restaurant at Wayson's Corner, Md., in Anne Arundel County, Saturday afternoon by Lawrence Prentiss, chief counselor at the school.

Prentiss, who was on crutches, tried to get the boy to return, he said, but he ran from the establishment. Prentiss called Maryland State Police and after an hour and a half of waiting called Chief Brown to complain he could get no cooperation.

Brown said he told him the restaurant was not in his jurisdiction but later sent Prince Georges County Policeman Lawson Peed and Benjamin Richards to meet two Anne Arundel policemen, Walters and Robert Mellin.

Prepared Statement

Brown said Prentiss had told him the boy was 17 and "dangerous" and trouble could be expected if he was not picked up. Prentiss yesterday said he had prepared a statement on the entire incident which he had filed with John F. Cairns, superintendent of the school, but that he could not release it until he had been given permission by Gerard Shea, director of the District Board of Public Welfare.

Detective Free, who investigated the case, said Peed and Walters agreed that Walters was the last one to shoot just before the boy threw up his hands and fell to the swamp with a groan. They had pursued him across the Patuxent River where he fled after they attempted to capture him in another Wayson's Corner restaurant.

Funeral services for the boy will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the B. Wheatley Funeral Home, Alexandria, Va., with burial in the Ivy Hill Cemetery, Alexandria.

The lights came on in the Nelson house.

Mike Nelson, who had been cutting the grass, pushed the lawn mower back until it clanged against the garage wall and walked leisurely across the fragrant, grassy lawn to the house.

His wife, Alicia Nelson, put away the last of the supper dishes, took off her apron, switched out the kitchen light and came primly into the living room.

"Thought we might take in a show," Mike said.

"Oh, for heavens sake. I'm too tired to go to the movies. I know there's nothing on." She looked at her husband's feet, sprawled in front of him as he lounged deeply in a chair.

"Mike, can't you ever come in this house without tracking in something? Just look at all that grass on your shoes."

Mike looked down at his shoes, curled his toes against the leather. More drying grass dropped on the floor. He stood quickly, walked across the room and into the kitchen. In a moment Alicia heard the slam of the refrigerator door, the clank of a beer opener on a can, then silence.

"Mike, now don't you dare," she said. "You know how I feel about that."

Mike looked at his wife for a moment in silence. "Oh, shut up," he said. "I'm going to bed."

"Mike, can't you ever come in this house without tracking in something?"

Later, Alicia heard the slow drone of the radio as Arch MacDonald reported the play-by-play of the ball game.

Next morning Young Mike, aged 6, burrowed out from the covers of his bed, glanced sleepily at the sun and smiled at a bird, head cocked, who peered at him from the window's edge.

The sun was not yet hot, and he could hear the early morning noises of the neighborhood. The paper boy with his creaky bike; the rhythmic jar of milk bottles carried up the well-trimmed walks; the "Bye, Daddy" that came from voices no deeper than his.

His father, as usual, had left for work when Young Mike came down to breakfast. His mother put cereal and soft boiled eggs before him, poured him a glass of milk, then hurried off to her own room to finish dressing for work.

"Hurry, Michael, you'll be late for school."

Then his lunch box, with elephants painted all around; a final patting of his clothes, the customary "Goodby, dear, learn something today."

Young Mike walked slowly down the street. He fell in behind two other boys his own age who lived in the block.

"My dad's better'n yours," one was saying.

"Is not."

"Is."

"Is not."

Young Mike pursed his lips thoughtfully. When he had been a little boy, his mother hadn't allowed him to play with other children. She had said the neighborhood was bad.

But that was before the Nelsons had moved to the new house a year ago. Now, without really thinking, Mike had decided the other children didn't want to play with him.

Defensively, he wondered whether he ought to say something about his father.

A car passed close to the curb, spattering Mike's pants with mud. His mother wouldn't like it if he came home with his clothes mussed. He brushed at the mud frantically, and smeared it into the cloth. At that moment, the two boys turned, looked at Mike.

"Sissy, sissy," they said. "Why don't you play with the girls?"

As the day wore on, Miss Prentiss watched Mike more and more closely. He looked almost ill. He was, as usual, listless about games. He played by himself with blocks or clay. Miss Prentiss, too, pursed her lips thoughtfully.

When school was dismissed she filled out her teacher's records, closed her desk and walked the three blocks from the school to the Nelson house. She was waiting on the front step when Alicia Nelson came home from her Government job.

She was still there when Young Mike came home, an hour later, from his customary afternoon with his grandmother, who three days a week made sure he practiced his piano lessons.

To Alicia Nelson, Miss Prentiss later came to signify an end—and a beginning.

And now, since her name is not really Alicia Nelson, nor her son's name Young Mike, her story, selected because it is typical of so many marriages, can safely be told by the Family Services Association.

It was to that organization that "Miss Prentiss" sent Alicia. There wasn't anything basically wrong with her—she was just mixed up. And her family was getting mixed up, they sometimes break up, and then the community has to worry about it.

"Sissy, sissy," they said

FSA found out a lot about Alicia Nelson. She had been brought up by a domineering father who abhorred alcohol to the point of highest intolerance. The distaste had been so ingrained in Alicia that when her husband drank a beer she was sure he was headed for alcoholism.

She had hoped to marry a man with the looks of Tyrone Power and the money of John D. Rockefeller—marriage fantasy, they call it. Mike Nelson was neither. He was a calm, easy-going man with some small remnants left of a good disposition. He was a good provider. He didn't step out on his wife.

But Alicia was ashamed of him because he was a machinist—albeit a skilled one. He made as much money as professional men, but Alicia wouldn't talk about him to the other women she worked with. His job.

She didn't want young Mike to associate with children when he was small because she didn't think they were "good" enough for him in the neighborhood in which they lived. When they moved to a "good" neighborhood, at her insistence, and purchased an expensive house, Mike didn't know how to play with children.

Alicia aspired high—but she had gotten way off the track.

The case worker's report:

When her husband drank a beer she was sure he was headed for alcoholism

"Gradually she began to recognize what she was doing and could then begin to control her behavior . . . With new understanding she stopped doing the things that deprecated her husband's ability . . . The child is now playing with other children and making a satisfactory adjustment in school . . .

"She and her husband are gaining a greater companionship than they have ever had . . . She will be able to handle these problems herself."

Now the "Nelsons" are just an FSA statistic. A closed case.

When the Family Service Association holds its annual meeting Tuesday at Barker Hall, the Nelson case probably won't be mentioned. But people interested in FSA work will discuss the Nelsons in a broad sense—community planning for family services.

Science Keeps You Young

Are You As Lovely As You Could Be?

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S only human to resist aging as long as possible . . . or longer. We do not want to look old or feel old. And so the question is: Are the commonly-accepted consequences of aging inevitable, or can they be altered?

Science doesn't know all the answers yet, but far more has been discovered than the majority of people are putting into practice. For all our reluctance to grow old, the blushing truth is we are not all staying as young as we could.

There is abundant evidence that the vague aches and ailments of middle age, formerly thought to be a more or less normal part of aging, are in reality directly due to malnutrition. And there is definite proof that the formidable list of progressive degenerative disorders characteristic of later maturity are not inevitable with aging.

This assurance is given by no less an authority than Dr. Edward J. Steiglitz, one of the principal researchers on anti-aging, and author of the book, "The Second Forty Years."

Malnutrition Speeds Aging

SINCE it has been proved that malnutrition leads to premature aging, why are the majority so slow to take advantage of the newer knowledge of nutrition? For one reason, many do not realize that one can eat a lot and still be malnourished, and that overweght is just as much a symptom as underweight. Malnutrition often stems from poor food habits. But food habits have tough fibers. Many middle-agers are like the man who, taken to task about his poor eating habits, bristled, "I eat what I please . . . I didn't know there were any rules about it."

There definitely are rules, and if you are interested in extending the best years, here they are:

Start the day with a good breakfast, including an orange or grapefruit or the juice, and an egg, or cereal with milk.

Milk Furnishes Needed Calcium

BUILD the three meals around the foods which generally furnish complete protein, minerals and vitamins—3 glasses of milk, or 2 glasses and 1 ounce of cheese; 1 or 2 eggs; a serving of a dark green leafy, or a yellow, vegetable, plus 2 other vegetables; 3 fruits, fresh, canned, frozen or dried, includng 1 citrus fruit; a serving of meat, fish or fowl (have liver or other meat organs once a week); whole grain or enriched bread or cereal; butter or margarine, and perhaps a vitamin concentrate.

You may question why 3 glasses of milk, why a dark green leafy vegetable, why oranges when they are so expensive, and why a vitamin concentrate? Here is why. Milk furnishes calcium and abundant calcium is needed in middle age and later years. This mineral not only keeps bones from getting fragile but helps extend life at its prime. The dark leaves of vegetables and the deep yellow vegetables furnish Vitamin A; the citrus fruits contain Vitamin C, and a concentrate or cod liver oil insures an abundance of these life-substances necessary to the proper utilization of the mineral.

The nutrition of each period of life is important, not only for that period but for the years to follow.

Ask Anne

No Cinch to Entertain 18 People At Supper—But Buffet Style Meal Always Simplest at Big Parties

DEAR ANNE:

My husband and I are planning to have a buffet supper for a group of friends soon—about 18 people. Since I haven't been housekeeping too long, I find several questions arising in connection with giving this party. Can you give me some ideas on how to serve the buffet easily and properly? Should I ask a friend to help me? (I will have no hired help.)

MRS. K. Y. G., Hyattsville.

Although entertaining for 18 is not a task to be sneezed at, you have certainly chosen one of the easiest, most gracious types of party to have.

Yes, it would be a good idea to ask one—or even two—of the feminine guests to assist you in serving.

Use your main dining table for the buffet and have one friend seated at the head of the table, serving the main dish, and the other opposite her serving the salad or the beverages. This depends on how the food is arranged on the table. Guests will serve themselves to all other dishes, as well as to napkins and silverware.

In her book, "Planning and Serving Your Meals" (Whittlesey House), Mary E. Goldman points out that it's a great convenience to the server at a buffet to have a guest stop at her left-hand side to receive his plate. The right hand is thus free to serve, while the left hand is used to hand the plate to the guest. The guest should then proceed around the right side of the table. As each guest completes his service, the hostess is present to assist him in finding a place to sit.

After the completion of the main course, the table may be cleared by the hostess with the assistance of one or two friends and the guests' plates taken. The dessert course can then be served to each guest individually (bringing it straight to them from the kitchen). Or it can be arranged on the table, along with coffee, and the guests can come to the buffet for it.

DEAR ANNE:

May I suggest another simple way to wash Venetian blinds? I use your bathtub method, too, but when the tapes are not too soiled, my system causes less wear and tear on the muscles than coping with a heavy dripping blind in tub and shower.

I unlace the cords clear to the top, by removing the brads holding the tapes at the bottom, unknotting the cords, and carefully noting how the cords are strung, so that relacing later is easy. The slats slide out.

At the kitchen sink, I lay each slat flat on the drainboard and, with sponge and heavy soapsuds, the dirt wipes off. Rinsing quickly with medium hot water, I then stack them like a picket fence around my kitchen. They dry without wiping in 10 minutes or less—and then are put back in the tapes. Restringing is faster than lacing a shoe. Knot the cord in the wooden hold and replace brads.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you recommend a good book on the general subject of housekeeping? I'm a novice, but want to start the habit of doing my work as thoroughly and effectively as possible.

MRS. H. M. R., Arlington.

There are several on the market which are excellent, giving you suggestions about organizing your work as well as doing individual tasks well without back-breaking effort. The names of two of these are: "How to Keep House," by Mary Davies Gillies (Harper & Brothers), and "America's Housekeeping Book," compiled by the New York Herald Tribune Home Institute (Scribners.)

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

PETUNIA!

A festive centerpiece for Kids
Is quite a cinch to make.
Frost your animal crackers pink
And march them 'round a cake!

Good idea, Petunia! They'll stand upright in thick frosting, and be mighty good to eat as well as pretty.

MONDAY SUPPER

Tuna and Rice Casserole
Buttered Squash
Lettuce Wedges with Roquefort Dressing
Bread and Butter
Cherry Cobbler Beverage

TUNA AND RICE CASSEROLE—Ingredients: ¾ cup uncooked rice 1⅛ cups water, 1¾ teaspoons salt, 1 bouillon cube, ½ cup ripe olives, 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons flour, 1½ cups milk, 1 tablespoon finely grated onion, 2 tablespoons finely diced pimiento, 1 seven-ounce can tuna fish, ¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs.

Method: Wash rice. Put in a saucepan with water, 1 teaspoon of the salt and the bouillon cube; bring to a boil and cook tightly covered over very low heat 20 to 30 minutes. Cut olives from pits into large pieces. Melt butter or margarine and blend in flour. Stir in milk, and cook stirring continuously until thickened. Add remaining salt, onion, pimiento and olives. Arrange half the rice in bottom of greased 2-quart casserole; spread with half the tuna coarsely flaked. Pour half the sauce over mixture. Repeat the layers and top with crumbs. Bake in moderate (350 F.) oven 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

In Memoriam

ROBINSON DAVID S. In loving memory of our grandson who died one year ago today, May 8, 1949.

Though we thought you a gift, we were wrong, dear;
God just loaned you to us for a while
To gladden our home with your laughter,
Your love, and your dear baby smile.
The days were too happy to last, dear;
But we'll always remember, and pray,
That our angel in heaven be waiting
To welcome us in some sweet day.

Grandmother and Grandfather,
MARY AND DAVIS COLBERT.

Exodus to Europe Beginning

By Marie McNair

PRINCE and Princess Christian of Hesse, who have been at the Mayflower for the winter, entertained at luncheon there yesterday. The party was an informal farewell, for the Prince and Princess will leave this week on their annual summer trip to Europe.

Their guests were Mme. Augusto Rosso, Countess de Castellane, Mrs. George Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brooks, Prince Toumanoff, Col. William Littauer, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Fred Roy, Capt. Richard Whitten and Mrs. Whitten, the former Princess of Saxe-Coburg de Gotha, niece of Prince Christian.

Prince and Princess Christian will leave the end of the week for New York and will sail on May 18 to go to Paris. They expect to return to Washington in the autumn. Princess Christian is the former Elizabeth Reid Rogers of Washington.

Prince and Princess Christian will be among the first of the summer travelers to Europe. Clarence Hewes will sail May 31 on the Queen Elizabeth to spend the season in London. Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKnew are sailing this month, too, and others to leave soon are Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar and Jack Logan. Miss Carolyn Nash will leave the end of June for three months in France.

Tregaron Welcomes Madame Minister

FIRST date on Mrs. Perle Mesta's calender yesterday was the luncheon at Tregaron, home of former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies.

From there our Minister to Luxembourg went for cocktails to Miss Carolyn Nash's Georgetown house, where a small group had gathered in the garden. Last night Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark were hosts at dinner in honor of Mrs. Mesta at Anderson House.

Another popular lady being widely entertained during her week's stay here is Senora de Espil, wife of the former Argentine Ambassador. Leland Harrison, former U. S. Minister to Switzerland, and Mrs. Harrison were hosts at dinner last night in her honor.

Party Celebrates Hostess' Birthday

MR. AND MRS. JAMES WHITEHEAD entertained at dinner before the St. John's Supper Club dance on Saturday night. The party was in celebration of Mrs. Whitehead's birthday.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Glen E. Edgerton entertained a few guests at a dinner last evening at Normandy Farm.

Mrs. Frank Pace, wife of the Secretary of the Army, is the guest in whose honor Mrs. Roy North, wife of the Postmaster of Washington, will entertain at luncheon in the Palladian Room of the Shoreham Hotel on Wednesday. Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, will be ranking guest.

Invitations for a cocktail party on Wednesday, May 24, have been issued by the Ambassador of Ceylon and Mme. Corea in honor of the Minister of Transport and Works of Ceylon, Colonel the Hon. Sir John Kolalawela, K. B. E.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Theil Hoffacker of Journeys End, St. Davids, Pa., are in Washington for a few days, having come to attend the reception Friday evening given by the Pakistan Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani in honor of the Prime Minister of Pakistan and Begum Liaquat Ali Khan.

Tobé Says...

Hand in Glove With Summer

Perhaps I'm a bit old-fashioned but I do think no woman looks really well dressed—in the city at least—without gloves.

Because everything is either short-sleeved or sleeveless this summer—there is extra fashion emphasis on gloves. The smartest are longer lengths as I've said here before—white glace leather for dress-up, white fabric for general wear.

But the little short gloves look smart with short sleeves too—and here you have much more variety—washable doeskin, cotton or nylon string, nylon—both double woven and sheer, and all kinds of white cotton gloves including pique, linen and organdy as well as the traditional double woven cottons.

As for color—it's white all the way from now on.

One on the Aisle—

One of the World's Seven Wonders

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE SEVEN WONDERS of the modern world—to many of us, at least—Betty Grable has several moments to cheer your heart in "Wabash Avenue," the new Technicolor musical at the Palace.

Right off the bat Betty does a strip act—"Shimmy Like My Sister Kate"—that's one of the least inhibited sequences of the year. Wearing a series of costumes that become more wildly absurd with the addition of each inch of material, Betty stomps and snorts her way through the picture's first half happily. The fun wears down, alas, as the writers strive to tie up the plot ends in true movie musical style, but a few moments of egregious brass makes the first half of this yarn fun.

As usual, we're back in the Golden Past, specifically that first Chicago Fair. The Golden Past of Technicolor musicals bears, as we all know, no resemblance whatever to anything alse on earth. The men's costumes and allusions to Chicago of the '90s tell us where we are and when, but then the 1950 tone sets in. No one for a minute believes that the ladies of the chorus dressed like this 50-odd years ago, indeed Betty's shimmy costume would probably have kept the Gayety open to remunerative burlesque. The "huh-who-me-cripes-snakes" conversations are distinctly 1950 show world and even the feather boas, malnourished they may be, still have an atomic air.

And Betty's hairdo is certainly the '90's as 1950 sees such. Piled high atop the Grable pate are hordes of aluminum shavings, nothing like hair at all, yet totally bewitching. And surely the limbs of chorus girls in the '90's had, if grandpa was right, an ivory texture quite unlike the stimulating if healthy pink Miss Grable flashes for the customers.

The story—a feud between Victor Mature and Phil Harris—for ownership of Betty and partnership in a gambling palace—has been designed for the Grable. Thought the two boys are amusing enough and though James Barton is repeating the drunken scenes that were the sole virtue of "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady," all scenes and dances have been designed with Betty in mind. She's taken on some of the exuberance of Betty Hutton and some of the tough wariness of Mae West, but one complains not.

For it's Betty Grable's field day, whether singing "I Remember You," "I Walk With Billy," "Wilhelmina" or insulting Mature. And while it rolls down hill after a flash beginning, her admirers can still rejoice that Our Betty's pretty wonderful.

"WABASH AVENUE," 20th Century-Fox release produced by William Perlberg. Screen play by Henry Tugend and Charles Lederer. Lyrics and music by Mac Gordon and Joseph Murove, with old songs arranged by Herbert Spencer and Earle Hagen. Dances by Billy Daniel. Directed by Henry Koster. At the Palace.

THE PIX today goes on its new summer schedule, accenting appeal to night moviegoers . . . First showing of "The Mad Ghoul" at 6:25, last of "The Scarlet Claw" at 10:15.

MOVIE QUIZ, in which the movies strike back at the fading radio giveways, makes its bow this week in four of the Sidney Lust Maryland theaters . . . Every Tuesday night the prize competitions will go on at the Cheverly, every Wednesday at the Bethesda and, on Thursday nights, at both the Marlboro and the Milo . . . It all works up into a regional and a national contest.

KURT WEILL'S "Down in the Valley" will have its first Washington performances this week, as will Richard Harrity's prize-winning "Hope Is the Thing With Feathers," on a double bill to be offered by the Mount Vernon Players, 900 Massachusetts ave. . . . The run opens Thursday night and will continue through the 27th . . . Donald Muir has directed what looms as one of the most interesting amateur evenings of the year.

ANOTHER ACTING group makes its bow tonight, the 20th Century Players, who'll be calling the Cafritz Auditorium, in the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts., home . . . The Players have high things to say about their manuscript tragedy by S. Lee Pogostin, "Period, Period, Period" . . . The author states that varius producers made numerous offers to buy the play if he would consent to change the script so that it would be more conventional" . . . Anyway, to repeat, the play's called "Period, Period, Period," which is a very daring thing to call anything, let alone a play . . . We'll tell you later in the week about Tuesday night's performance.

ROLAND HAYES, indefatigable and always the musician, will give a recital for the benefit of the Washington Fellowship . . . in the Metropolitan A.M.E. Church, M st. off 16th at 8:30 next Monday.

TALLULAH arrives with her "Private Lives" tonight at the Gayety, a flashy event indeed for the old playhouse . . . Donald Cook and Wiliam Langford head the supporting cast and how the late Speaker of the House would have enjoyed watching his daughter bring her international fame to the Old, now New, Gayety! . . . Tallulah was here just a year ago, outspoken about our lack of theater . . . She said she'd come back first chance she got and even if her price scale forgets two stanzas on the subway track and two on her citronella circuit, the fact remains Tallu's the most glamorous gal yet to inherit Ann Corio's old dressing room and flesh pink spots.

BETTY A LA MAE: In "Wabash Avenue" Betty Grable manages, every once in a while, to look like Mae West, which isn't a bad trick since you get advantages of both in the new musical at the Palace. Victor Mature is the fascinated gent

American Music Festival Opens With Fine Concert at Gallery

By Paul Hume

American music comes into its own each May in Washington's National Gallery of Art.

The seventh annual American Music Festival opened there last night with Maurice Wilk, violinist, and Philip Fradkin, pianist. The concert was given over to four pieces for their two instruments.

Three of the four had been heard in Washington before, one quite recently. Walter Piston's Sonata was played at the Phillips Gallery five weeks ago. It is a solidly built work, full of the kind of music America's best composers are learning to write.

Gail Kubik's Sonatina is made for enjoyment. Conservative in idiom, it is clear, soundly devised, and well written for both instruments. Its middle movement has the benefit of an engaging melody, original in conception and treatment.

The closing half of the recital was lighter in mood than the Kubik-Piston beginning. Variations and a Capriccio by Norman Dello Joio led to the world premiere of Ned Rorem's "Sonata in Four Scenes." Dello Joio does not attempt profundities in his Variations. They often move right into the lush color of Hollywood's best paid composers.

But for immediate appeal to large audiences, Dello Joio wrote the most successful piece.

Rorem's Sonata contains a traditional opening, followed by a Waltz, Funeral, and Final Dance. The opening is marked "wild, but steady." The wildness is confined to some loud banging on the piano for a few seconds. Then things settle down to a good, solid allegro, with not much originality of style or line.

The waltz is showy but empty. The funeral section achieves finer feeling and a kind of genuine mood. For his closing, Rorem kids Mendelssohn's Wedding March a bit, with brilliance and good taste. He could help his sonata by making it a work in three, shorter movements.

The two artists played with absolute authority, and constant tonal polish. Fradkin is a virtuoso pianist who plays with enviable ease. He might have used greater percussive effect at times, to balance the muffling qualities of the hall. But his sound qualities were a ceaseless job.

Wilk is the same kind of an artist. He needs more incisiveness in his shaping of phrases—a greater vigor in fortes. But, like Fradkin, he displays fine tone and insight into music which is not simple.

'Defeat of Communism' To Be Reviewed Tuesday

The Critics' Forum, Catholic Thought on the Best Sellers, will present the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John K. Cartwright, director of the forum, in a review of the best-selling book, "The Coming Defeat of Communism," by James Burnham, on Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

Shane MacCarthy, general chairman of the current affairs committee, Knights of Columbus, fourth degree, Washington Assembly, will serve as chairman.

At Warner

La Crawford Learns Her Lesson Again

"THE DAMNED DON'T CRY," Warner Brothers release produced by Jerry Wald. Screen play by Harold Medford and Jerome Weidman from a story by Gertrude Walker. Directed by Vincent Sherman. At the Warner.

THE CAST

Ethel Whitehead	Joan Crawford
George Castleman	David Brian
Nick Prenta	Steve Cochran
Martin Blackford	Kent Smith
Grady	Hugh Sanders
Patricia Longworth	Selena Royle
Sandra	Jacqueline de Wit
Mr. Whitehead	Morris Ankrum

Mrs. Whitehead	Sara Perry
Walter Talbot	Eddie Marr

IN THE WARNER'S "The Damned Don't Cry" Joan Crawford once more moves from the wrong side of the tracks to the rich side and finds that It Doesn't Pay.

This time Joan gives her young son an installment-plan cycle, which displeases her righteous, dull husband and, almost immediately leads to the boy's death. This gives Joan a chance to break away from drudgery and work her way up in the world.

Since Joan is perpetually working her way up in the world, this requires a degree of ingenuity on the part of any writer. Gertrude Walker's story gives her the works. Joan becomes a model, entertains the buyers, meets Auditor Kent Smith, induces him to work for Gambler David Brian. Joan's heights here are dizzying for lesser mortals, but she keeps her head and, on assignment from Brian, takes on a commission to put West Coast Gambler Steve Cochran on the spot.

Corpse-Strewn Finale

Comes Love. Poor Joan, dripping with jewels, furs and Everything in Life, finds that It Isn't All After All and she tries to shield her intended victim. Enraged Brian goes after her, as does Smith. It's the last act of "Hamlet" and if you think Joan's going to recover from the bullet wound Brian send's her, you'll at least have to realize that if she should, it will be a new, chastened Joan, willing to settle for the Wrong Side of the Tracks and Caspar Milquetoast.

Familiar? And how.

But wasn't it a beautiful weekend?—R. L. C.

Acheson Asked To Intervene In Film Talks

Hollywood, May 7 (U.P.)—The Hollywood AFL Council asked Secretary of State Dean Acheson today to intervene in the Anglo-American film conference opening in London May 15 to "protect the jobs and living standards of American motion picture workers."

The council also asked the executive council of American Federation of Labor, opening its quarterly session at Philadelphia Monday, to support its plea to Acheson.

Eric Johnston and Ellis Arnall will represent the American film industry in conferences with British Government officials to negotiate a new agreement replacing the Anglo-American film agreement expiring June 1.

The Hollywood council, representing 20,000 studio workers, contended the expiring agreement resulted in increasingly more American pictures being made in England by American companies employing English workers "at cut-rate wages below American standards." Figures were cited showing employment of manual labor in Hollywood studios plummeted from 24,000 in 1946 to 13,000 in March, 1950.

In its appeal to Acheson, the council quoted British Cabinet Minister Harold Wilson that the British Government "plans to bring all possible American film production to England."

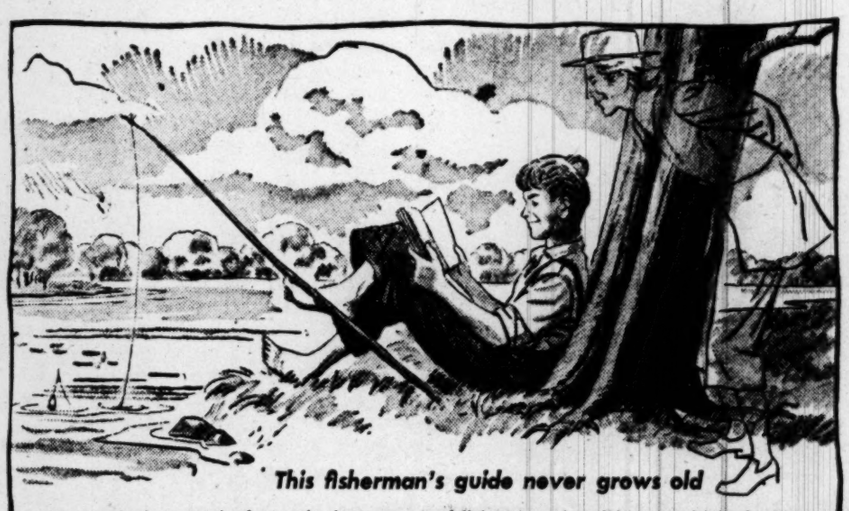
Look in the Book by Bell



This fisherman's guide never grows old

Few books have attained more lasting popularity than Izaak Walton's quaint treatise, The Compleat Angler.

Published for the first time almost 300 years ago, this leisurely written masterpiece still delights the ardent fisherman with its familiar instructions ("Use the worm as though you loved him . . . that he may live the longer"), its happy quotations, songs, poems and well-turned anecdotes.

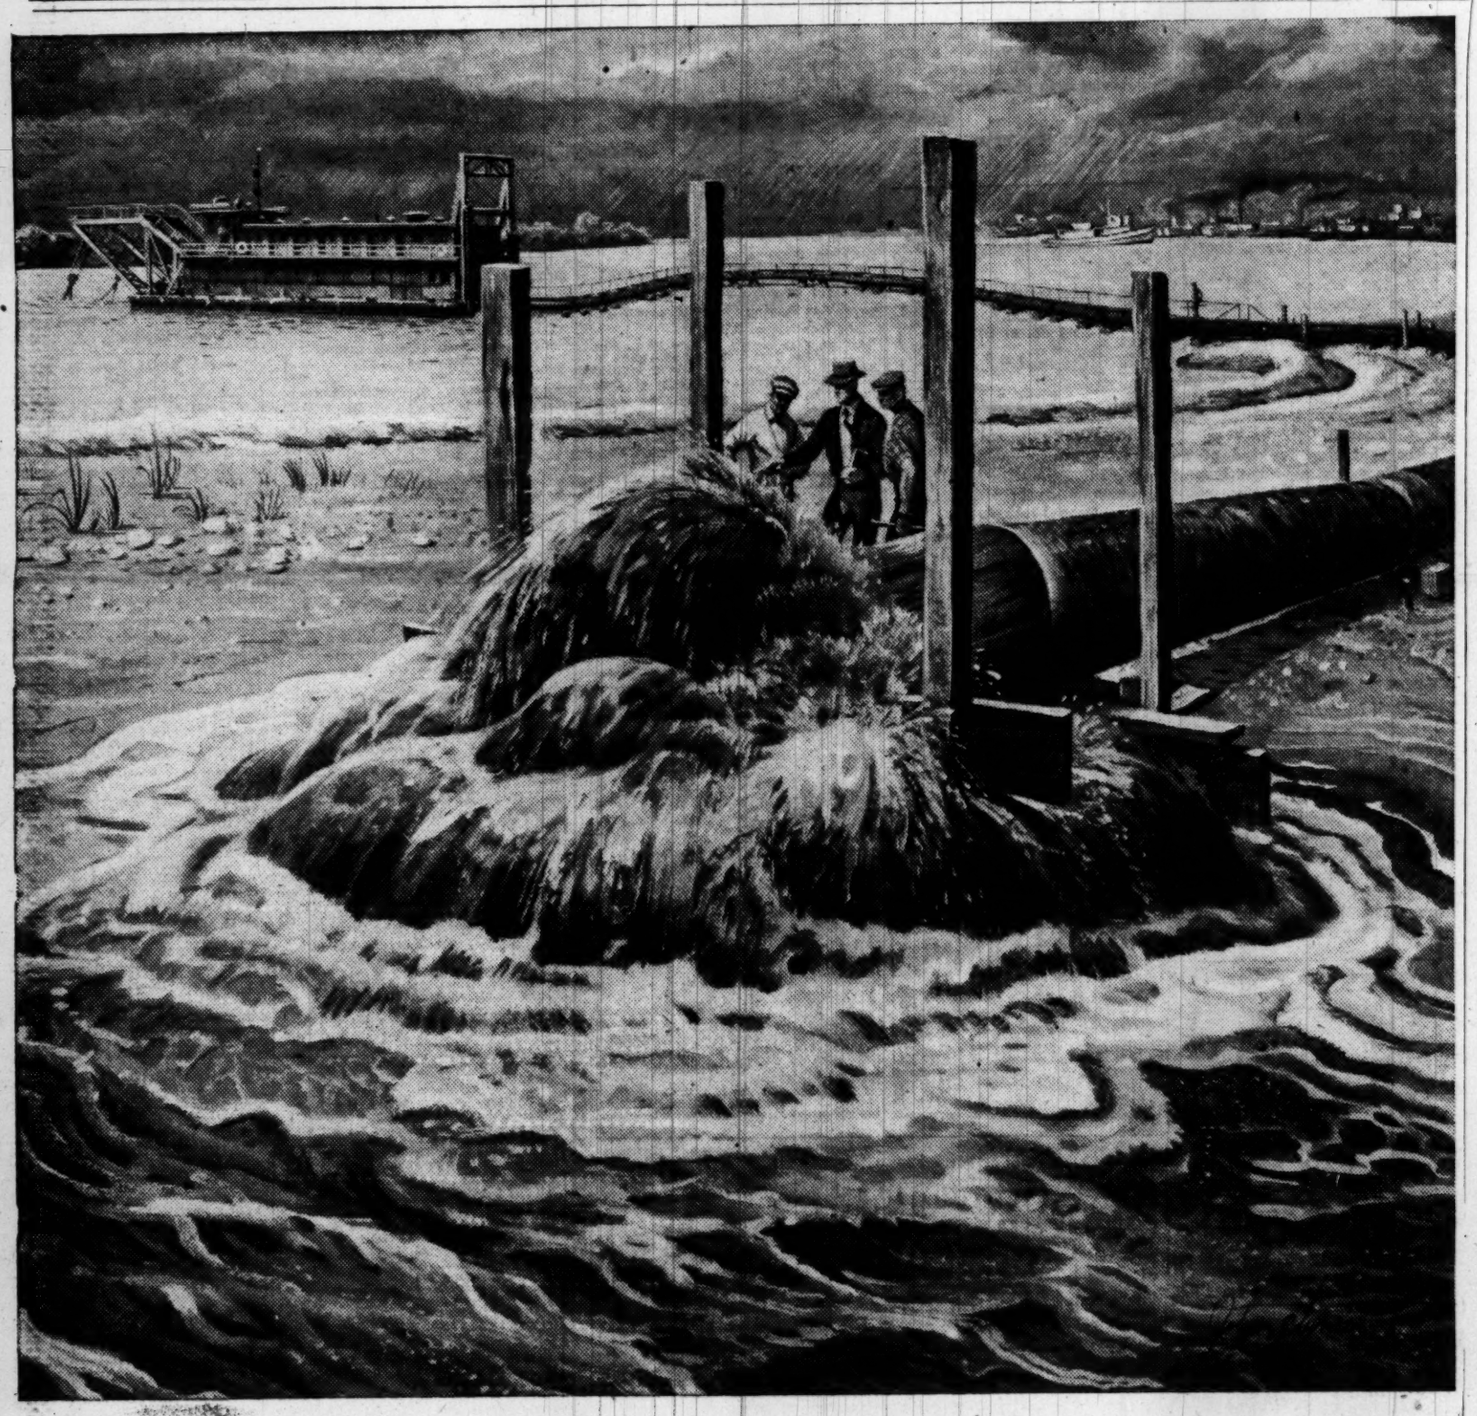
Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.



A New Bed for a Restless River...

how "Your Unseen Friend" helps keep the flood from your door

Old Man River never rests easy.

All year long, he twists and turns in his bed. And, in the spring, he sometimes forgets he's old. He leaves his bed, spreads across the lowlands, floods homes, and sweeps over rich farm lands on which cities depend for food.

When this happens, the flood control experts get busy.

They bring up dredges to make a new bed that's straighter and wider and deeper . . . so the river won't overflow its banks.

These dredges are big and tough and well-designed.

They have to be. They must gulp tons of mud, sand, and gravel. Force it up through pumps at high speed. And then pump it out through big, long steel pipes onto the surrounding land.

This calls for tough metal parts. And that's where Nickel comes into the picture.

Sometimes it's used in the cutter heads that chew up gritty silt.

Sometimes it's used in the pumps as well. It may be in the form of Nickel steel castings or Nickel cast iron ("Ni-hard"). But whatever the form, these Nickel alloys have what it takes to stand up to the harsh scraping action of fast-moving sand and gravel.

When you see a powerful dredge making a new river bed, or a big bulldozer clearing off land . . . when you see a lightning-fast jet plane, or a huge trailer truck . . . remember that Nickel figures importantly in the dependability of each.

You don't see the Nickel because it's intermixed with other metals . . . adding toughness, hardness, endurance, and other special properties. That's why Nickel is known as "Your Unseen Friend."

Fascinating Booklet, Free — There's a fascinating story behind the use of Nickel in much of what we eat, wear, use. Where does Nickel come from? How does Nickel serve you? Send for "The Romance of Nickel." Address Dept. 202z, New York 5, N. Y.

Having a 'Normal' Baby

Newswoman Tells of Her Own Motherhood

A new point of view on the much-discussed modern methods of childbirth is presented here by a newspaper woman who has just become a mother. Her series of five articles includes a first-hand study of the "natural childbirth" clinic at Yale University.

By Carol Taylor

CHAPTER ONE

After he told me that my pregnancy was "normal," my doctor sat me down in his office and faced me with the facts of a new life.

"Don't be nervous," he said, eyeing me gravely. "Having a baby is a perfectly natural process," (I was shaking in my shoes.)

I couldn't help smiling when I thought of all the mothers-to-be before me who probably had been ushered into the world of pregnancy, with this kind of advice from a well-meaning male doctor.

Natural! Bosh, I though. There's no man on earth who's naturally equipped to tell you what it's like to have a baby.

But I must admit, his simple instructions did begin to bear out his words.

He gave me a single prescription—for calcium tablets.

"Eat plenty of protein," he instructed. "Fish, eggs, meat. Two tall glasses of milk a day. Cut out fats, Keep your weight down."

I asked about continuing my work.

"Work 'til the last day if you want to," he answered briskly.

How about smoking and cocktails?

He looked up a bit suspiciously (so I thought), but his answer was perfunctory. "In moderation" was all he said.

The interview was the longest I ever had with him. It lasted 10 minutes. I'll admit I was a little disappointed that he didn't make more over my condition. But being naturally squeamish about clinical discussions, I soon fell in with his casual approach.

Mistaken Ideas

A number of "whys?" popped into my head that first day, but I was too anxious to get out of the office to indulge my curiosity. So I went through pregnancy with a number of mistaken ideas.

Several months later when my editor (also male and perfunctory) asked me to write a series on having a baby, I decided to repeat those questions to medical authorities.

Why are mothers-to-be instructed to keep their weight down? The desirable weight gain, I found is quoted as low as zero by some obstetricians if the pregnant women is well upholstered at the onset.

Few recommend that she gain more than 20 pounds and the average desirable weight gain is 15 pounds. Of course, a woman of large build may gain more in proportion.

All through pregnancy, I had the idea that I must keep my weight down so my baby would be small and easier to deliver. I am now in a position to state authoritatively that it isn't so. I have been told again and again by top ranking doctors that the weight gain of the mother has not been proved to have any effect whatsoever on the size of the baby.

My final authority on the subject of nutrition in pregnancy was Dr. Norman Jolliffe, noted nutritionist.

"If the mother gains too much weight there is a high incidence of toxemia," he said. "High weight has just as poor a nutritional status as low weight, representing an unbalanced diet."

Toxemia during pregancy is a poisoning of the blood causing pernicious vomiting.

If a mother develops toxemia she may bear a dead baby, or her own life may be endangered, he explained.

Why was I advised to eat plenty of protein, maintain a well-balanced diet? I had read somewhere that the baby was nourished only through the blood stream and that what the mother-to-be ate had nothing to do with the health of her baby.

But today authorities say that there is no development in the field of childbirth so important as the nutrition of the mother.

"The nutrition of the patient plays a most significant role in the health of the mother and of her unborn child," Dr. Jolliffe said. He spoke of controlled studies made in Boston, Toronto and Philadelphia.

In former days, doctors warned pregnant women to be wary of meat and other proteins, thus going along with the now disproved idea of a protein-free diet for persons with a kidney ailment.

"You should also see a relatively small increase in intake of calories, Dr. Jolliffe continued, "which means the pregnant woman must cut down on vitamin-free caloric foods. Watch those soft drinks and ice cream sodas.

"Then actually," I said to the doctor, "The old idea that a mother-to-be should eat for two isn't so far wrong after all?"

He nodded. "But not in the old interpretation. 'Eating for two' doesn't mean eating for two in quantity, but in quality."

Two doctors—the family doctor and the obstetrician—were in accord on the advice to "work 'til the last day if you want to."

Dr. Claude Heaton, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at New York University-Bellevue Medical Center, told me that the majority of his patients are business or professional women. And they make good patients.

"A woman getting up in the morning to go to a job doesn't have time to fuss with every little pain and ache," he said.

Miss Lottie Morrison, R.N., assistant director of Sloane Hospital for Women at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, spoke proudly of her working mothers.

"We have nurses who nurse to the first pain," she said. "And I see the teachers from Columbia come up here, park their cars, and come in and have a baby."

Miss Morrison, who has been at Medical Center since it was built, and at the old Sloane Hospital before that, reminisced:

"I remember when, after a woman was three months pregnant, they wouldn't let her go for a car ride, and wouldn't let her go any place on a train."

Dr. Joseph Smith, on obstetrical service at Greenpoint Hospital, explained that prior to the war, most doctors thought it inadvisable for pregnant women to ride in autos or trains.

Eperience in wartime, when wives traveled widely to be with their husbands, showed that advice to be incorrect, he said. "There was no more incidence of premature delivery on account of it."

I didn't find a doctor who disapproved of moderate smoking and drinking by a normally pregnant woman if she had been in the habit before pregnancy.

Some doctors said that an occasional highball or cocktail has a definite therapeutic value for the pregnant woman inclined to be tense.

Don't get the idea that having a baby is a breeze.

Obviously, casualness is the defense of the harassed obstetrician. But the doctor has something to back him up when he says: "Having a baby is a perfectly natural process."

'Victory Dinner' Set At Sidwell Friends

Final report of the Sidwell Friends School Building Fund campaign will be given at a "victory dinner" at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday in the school's dining room.

Meantime, school officials announced that the cornerstone of the new Middle School building—a project included in the drive—will be laid May 16. Wilmot Rufus Jones, principal of the Wilmington Friends School, will officiate. A pageant depicting scenes from the school's 67-year history will be part of the ceremonies.

Wishing Well will be found on Page B-6 today.

The Irony of It All

Wax of Video Show Won Peabody Prize

By C. E. Butterfield

NEW YORK (AP).—Among the George Foster Peabody awards for radio and television presented the other day was the citation given the radio version of Author Meets the Critics of NBC. The video version, which is identical, wasn't mentioned.

The award was in the "educational program" category, which in the case of TV went to another ABC program, the war series on film, "Crusade in Europe."

Originated locally some years ago as radio only, then switched to MBS, Author Meets Critics branched into television when it was moved to NBC. Later in the transfer to ABC, it went back on radio, too.

At present the program is given first on TV. A sound recording of the discussion is made and run off on the radio about a week later. It was this recording that got the recognition.

The visual aspects apparently did not give the series the qualities to be expected of a prize show, where the sound often is regarded as incidental to the sight.

WITH COLOR television so much to the fore these days, it was only natural that the question would come up at the annual RCA stockholders meeting. It took the form of the usual query, "When will we get color?"

Response came from the chairman, David Sarnoff, in these words: "Within a year or two after the Federal Communications Commission sets standards (of operation) we should have color programs and color sets."

He gave no indication as to how much time would elapse before the FCC might fix the standards, or what they might be.

Incidentally, testimony of Sarnoff before the FCC last week was a climactic point in the eight-month hearing on the status of color television.

General Sarnoff, president of the RCA and identified by the Television Broadcasters' Association as "the father of television," was called primarily to answer the question, "What will RCA do if the CBS color system should be adopted as the operating standard?"

The CBS method, known as "field-sequential" Because it sends one color after the other, contains a motor-driven disk to reproduce the color. RCA's system is identified as "dot interlace," the color being transmitted dot after dot. It includes a recently introduced single tri-color tube for full electronic reproduction.

Here is Sarnoff's answer: "We would make and sell field-sequential color receivers utilizing the tri-color tube, as the public demand for such receivers might exist." He added that his company would make tri-color tube converters and separate adapter units for sets already in public use.

Thus, he was saying in effect that while RCA would be prepared to make CBS type receivers it would not use a mechanical reproducing system. This was in keeping with the rest of his testimony in which he generally deprecated the CBS system and sought to stress the advantages of the RCA method, also designed to operate compatibly with black and white.

MORE CHANGES resulting from the transfer of Halls of Ivy from Friday to eight Wednesday nights on NBC May 10 included:

Dangerous Assignment from Mondays to 10:30 Wednesday nights; Christopher London, formerly Sundays, being revived to go into the vacated Monday time; Dick Powell's Richard Diamond, originally listed for Wednesdays at 8, instead is going off for the present.

Vacation time of the Fanny Brice-Baby Snooks NBC Tuesday nighter has been set for May 9 to October 3, the replacement to be a sponsor-produced Starlight Concert directed by the conductor of the winter orchestra, Carmen Dragon.

Arthur Godfrey of CBS is to do an NBC-television show the same night he presents his May 15 Talent Scouts on both CBS radio and TV. It will be a special telecast on behalf of the Treasury Department's bond drive starting that day. Time is an hour after he finishes on CBS.

Puzzle About an Indian With Whiskers

Mrs. Neva Fayl of 225 W. Water st., Winchester, Va., invites you to test your wits on a riddle that's so old it has whiskers:

"A big Indian and a little Indian went fishing. The little Indian was the big Indian's son, but the big Indian was not the little Indian's father. How come?"

Oh, come now. Don't tell me you'll have to look at the end of the column for the answer.

RULES IS RULES

Clair Johnson takes time out from his duties with Congressional Quarterly News Features to report on some humorous goings-on at the Jefferson Village Apartments, on Lee blvd., in Arlington, Va.

The apartment managers have recently set up a new set of rules governing the collection of trash. It's got to be in a covered garbage can or tied in a neat bundle—otherwise the pickup men are instructed to ignore it.

Unfortunately, some trash doesn't lend itself well to being tied in neat bundles, and there aren't always enough cans to go around.

Last Monday one householder found himself with both a filled can and a bulging sack of trash. But the fellows on the truck wouldn't accept the sack. "It's against the rules," they said.

So the householder said: "Okay, empty the can." They emptied the garbage can, and had no sooner set it down again than the wily tenant popped his sack into it.

Acknowledging defeat with a grin, the trashmen emptied the can a second time.

SALESMANSHIP

Practically everybody who owns an automobile has in recent months gotten a postcard offering to buy it.

"I need a 1947 Scatterbolt Six," the card will say, "and I'll pay up to $1400 for it." A name and phone number conclude the message.

By a strange coincidence, the make and model named in the postcard happen to be exactly what you own. A bit bewildered by this offer from a stranger, you call up. And then you find out that the fellow who sent the card is an automobile salesman.

His company has hired people to check the official registration lists and write appropriate postcards to everybody who owns a salable car. The price is left blank, to be filled in (in the same kind of ink) by the salesman assigned to the account.

The result is a "personal" card with strong sales appeal—and therefore a great number of leads for used car purchases and new-car trade-ins.

SMALL WORLD

"Back home in South Dakota," writes Mary Jane Torp of 2633 16th st. nw., "all the Coca-Cola bottles had 'Aberdeen, S. D.' stamped on the bottom.

"Today, after two years in Washington, I up-ended a Coke bottle and saw 'Muskegon, Mich.' Startled, I examined the rest of the bottles in the carton.

"I found one from Alexandria, one from Silver Spring, one from Winchester, Va., one from Columbia, S. C.—and believe it or not, one from Washington."

PERSONAL NOTES

J. E. Anderson, Camp Meeting rd., Silver Spring, Md.: The item you mention did appear in Reader's Digest. But if a similar story is available locally, that's no reason for not using it. If it's funny enough for the Digest, it's funny enough for me.

Paul C. James, University Station, Charlottesville, Va.: You have a sound gripe, and I'm passing your letter along to the boys who handle the Pittsburgh box scores. But please don't blame Povich for it. He isn't even in town during half the season.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

A program they always listened to
Was the "Double or Nothing" show;
But when they were blessed with twins again
He got rid of the radio.

DEPT. OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

The big Indian was the little Indian's mother, of course—and that reminds me of Maj. Charles S. Coulter's latest wisecrack:

"President Truman has deserted the Nats. He signed a bill to help the Indians."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Morgan and the Midget Recalled

By Drew Pearson

The President was enjoying a weekend cruise on the yacht Williamsburg recently when he and his party got arguing about what the considered to be an important point in American history. Neither side could agree.

Pearson

So finally Clark Clifford, ex-White House counsel and still of the poker-playing entourage, put in a long-distance call to New York Supreme Court Judge Ferdinand Pecora. The following conversation took place:

"Judge," said Clifford, "this is Clark Clifford; and I am calling from the Williamsburg. A group of us here are about evenly divided on a question, and we believe you are the one person who can give us the right answer."

"All right," replied Pecora, "I'll be glad to try."

"Was it in the Senate munitions investigation or at the Senate investigation of Wall Street that the midget sat on J. P. Morgan's knee?"

"It was at the investigation of Wall Street," replied Judge Pecora, who served as counsel for the Senate committee during that investigation.

"Can you give me the date of that incident?" continued Clifford.

"Yes, it was about May 28, 1933."

"Fine," said Clifford. "That's just what we wanted to know. Now, one other question. Did the investigation of Wall Street come before or after the Senate munitions investigation?"

"The Wall Street investigation came first," said Pecora and then added: "One other thing. The incident to which you refer did not occur during a Senate committee meeting. Neither I nor the Senate Banking and Currency Committee were present when the midget sat on J. P. Morgan's knee. It occurred before the committee came into the room."

Clifford thanked Judge Pecora and hung up.

No FDR Background

An interesting sidelight can be drawn from this conversation. Any newsman covering Washington, or any Government official close to the Roosevelt Administration would have remembered vividly the famous incident involving the circus midget and J. P. Morgan during the Senate probe which cleaned up Wall Street and led to the formation of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

And what the Clifford-Pecora conversation illustrates is that Truman has no one around him who knows the background of the Roosevelt reforms on which the Truman Administration is now building.

Truman's Low Ebb

President Truman is taking his swing through the Northwest at a time when his political barometer is the lowest since he lost control of Congress in 1946. The Pepper defeat in Florida plus the neck-and-neck Dixiecrat race in Alabama all go to support what the political dopesters previously predicted—that Truman stock is in the cellar.

There are four general reasons for his slump, as follows:

1. The McCarthy charges have cut deeper than Washington realized. While most people don't sympathize with McCarthy, they believe that where there's smoke there's fire. Also they wonder why the Administration has lacked cohesive rebuttal.

2. The Kansas City murders have focused attention on Truman and the Pendergast machine. Actually, Truman had sent his ace investigators into Kansas City, and deserves credit rather than blame in the Binaggio shootings. However, most folks don't know this—again due to poor public relations.

3. Economic Unrest — Farmers are irked at falling prices. Housewives are irked at wasted potatoes and price supports. The public is fed up with strikes and business is grousing about taxes.

4. Lack of Leadership — Gradually, the public is coming to the conclusion that there isn't much leadership in Washington. They can't put their finger on anything definite, but they feel that the White House is drifting rather than leading.

All of the above means that the President not only has to make some real speeches on his trip, but has to organize more consistent teamwork after he gets home.

Merry-Go-Round

Jolly Senator Alex Wiley is afraid the Joe McCarthy business may bounce against him in Wisconsin. Wiley, senior GOP Senator from Wisconsin, is up for re-election in November. Of every visitor Wiley anxiously inquires, "What are they thinking at home about Joe's charges? They aren't saying I'm mixed up in them, are they?"
